No. Dutchess Hospital Fights

By Jon Powers

RHINEBECK Rhinebeck's Northern Dutchess Hospital has launched a region-wide campaign to challenge a proposed state regulation that could force the hospital to eliminate its obstetrics and pediatrics services.

The proposed regulation, which was to have taken effect on January 1, has been delayed for at least another year. Northern Dutchess officials hope to use part of that time to solicit public and legislative support for their campaign to keep the hospital's maternity and child care units intact.

Conceived by the New York State Health Department, the proposed regulation would establish several criteria for hospitals that wish to retain obstetrics and pediatrics units. For instance, a hospital located in a county with a population density of 200 or more persons per square mile must record 1,500 births per year in order to avoid stiff financial penalties.

Dutchess County's population density is 282 persons per square mile. Northern Dutchess, however, averages only about 325 deliveries per year. Because it fails to meet the established criteria, the hospital could stand to lose $163,000 per year in cost reimbursements from the state if it refuses to close the two units.

The health department apparently believes that obstetrical and pediatric care would be improved at hospitals which handle a higher yearly volume of cases, and that cost efficiency would be improved if many of the smaller hospitals are forced out of the baby birth and child care business. That is a contention that Northern Dutchess officials emphatically dispute.

"Our quality of maternal and pediatric care is as good or better than most other hospitals in the region," said Dr. Richard Temple, president of the medical staff, "and it is costing less here for each maternal and pediatric day than most other hospitals."

Northern Dutchess officials presented a number of statistics to prove their argument at a press conference Friday afternoon. During the past three years, the perinatal mortality rate at Northern Dutchess has been lower than the rate at Benedictine Hospital; the Cesarean Section rate has been lower than both Benedictine and Kingston Hospitals; the maternal mortality rate for those same three years has been "zero," the same as the two Kingston Hospitals. The officials, however, did not offer similar comparisons with the two hospitals in Poughkeepsie.

According to hospital administrator Michael C. Mazzarella, elimination of maternity and child care services would have wide-ranging impacts on the community.

- Many of the patients who would normally utilize Northern Dutchess would have to travel to Poughkeepsie. Those not covered by Medicaid (87 per cent) would end up paying an average of $400 more to have a baby in Poughkeepsie than in Rhinebeck.

- Elimination of the pediatric unit at Northern Dutchess would mean that Rhinebeck's two pediatricians would probably leave the community.

- Elimination of the hospital's pediatric staff would mean that there would be no pediatricians on call at the emergency room. Twenty-eight per cent of the patients seen in the Emergency Room — or approximately 3,000 children per year — are pediatric problems. In addition, the emergency room would not have personnel qualified to handle emergency obstetric or gynecology cases.

"Northern Dutchess could end up being a geriatric hospital," said Dr. George Verrilli, co-chairman of the obstetrics department, "unable to render total service to the community."

It was Mazzarella's contention that the density requirements that have been proposed by the state aren't appropriate for their situation. Most of the county's population is located in the Poughkeepsie-Beacon area; the region serviced by Northern Dutchess Hospital is, by comparison, sparsely populated and should therefore be expected to handle fewer births each year.

The proposed regulation, which requires legislative approval, was sent back to committee for further study earlier this year. The hospital intends to contact state representatives from Ulster and Dutchess Counties to solicit their support, and is in the process of mailing more than 4,000 informational letters to former patients and "friends of the hospital" to ask their support.

"There seems to be an implication here that small hospitals are providing less than the best care possible in obstetrics and pediatrics," said Mazzarella. "We find that assumption inappropriate and we refute that argument."

Lottery Payroll Woes

ALBANY, N.Y. — The state lottery must solve its problems and get back in operation soon or it will be unable to meet its payroll, State Sen. John J. Marchi warned Saturday night.

Marchi, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said his staff told him it was "virtually certain" that the lottery would be unable to meet its payroll for the rest of the fiscal year if Gov. Hugh L. Carey's suspension of lottery operations continues.

Hints Hearst 'Surprise'

SAN FRANCISCO — Patricia Hearst is expected to plead innocent to bank robbery charges Monday, but her attorney said Saturday he may have a "surprise" when the heiress appears in court.

The attorney, Albert Johnson, also said he hopes to get a two-month delay in his client's trial, which the government wants to start before the end this year.

"I may have a surprise for you on that," Johnson said when asked what the defense would do at the hearing.

'Tip' Sees $ for N.Y.

NEW YORK — House Majority Leader Thomas "Tip" O'Neill predicted Saturday Congress will pass a $7 billion loan guarantee bill for New York City later this month—and that President Ford will sign it.

"While we don't have the votes in the House for the bill to pass now, we will have them when it comes to the floor a week from Monday," the Massachusetts Democrat said. (Earlier default stories on Page 38.)

The 'Phantom Scouts'

CHICAGO — The Chicago Daily News Saturday quoted two brothers as saying they took names from telephone books and old Scout charters to register more than 12,000 nonexistent Boy Scouts during a five-year period.

The names were part of scandal uncovered last year in which 35,000 phantom scouts were listed on membership rolls. The names were gathered to meet membership campaigns and to gain additional funds from the federal government's Model Cities program.

Broome Cleric Missing

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. — A $5,000 reward has been offered for information about the disappearance of a Fundamental Baptist preacher who for the last month has been receiving calls and letters that Satan wanted him for sacrifice.

The Rev. Donald La Rose, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Maine near here, was one of three Fundamentalist preachers who began getting warning letters and short threatening calls in October.

Confer on Sahara Crisis

WITH MOROCCANS, Spanish Sahara — Morocco's King Hassan II met with a special emissary from Spain Saturday in an effort to defuse the mounting crisis in the disputed territory of Spanish Sahara.

Hassan has poured thousands of unarmed Moroccan volunteers into Spanish Sahara in a bid for peaceful takeover of the territory. But there were signs Spain has stepped up preparations for armed resistance.

CBS Reflections in Bloodshot Eye:

$64,000 Indigestion . . . Quiz Show Scandal

(Editor's Note: This is the third in a series of eight articles written by Robert Metz on CBS: Reflections in a Bloodshot Eye, detailing the candid, explosive inside story of America's greatest entertainment factory. Today's story is about the $64,000 Indigestion: The Quiz Show.

It was June 7, 1955, at shortly before 10 p.m. A work-weary Ed Murrow and his producer Fred Friendly were waiting to do the regular See It Now broadcast — a month after Alcoa had announced that it was ending a courageous four-year association with the controversial documentary series.

Murrow, the most honored broadcaster in history, was puffing a cigarette, waiting to do part two of a report on smoking and lung cancer. While he waited, he watched fascinated and horrified as the new "lead-in" to his show — the show occupying the previous half-hour — enjoyed its debut. He turned to Fred Friendly and said, "Any bets on how long we'll keep this time period show?" The program was The $64,000 Question. Murrow knew that a hit show always makes the following time slot very appealing to advertisers, and See It Now wasn't a commercial enough program to cash in on the opportunities.

Louis G. Cowan, an independent producer of television shows, had come up with the concept for The $64,000 Question. The idea was a variation on an old radio quiz show that awarded $64 to the ultimate winner. The show had been popular enough to make the expression "That's the sixty-four-dollar question" part of the language.

Besides upping the money a thousandfold, Cowan wanted to seek out contestants with strong audience appeal and to build suspense by putting them in a glass isolation booth — to prevent tips from the studio audience. Winners would be "continuing heroes" having to trek their way to the Big Question over a period of weeks; and solemn financial men from banks or accounting firms would sanctify the proceedings by handing the master of ceremonies the questions in sealed envelopes.

No one could have guessed the degree to which The $64,000 Question would sweep the country. There was that big $64,000 prize to begin with and, as an added filip, the consolation prize — a Cadillac — for the loser. No one could resist the game. Or was it the players? The audiences continued to build, eventually taking a record 84.8 per cent share of the television watchers at that hour.

CBS officials saw the big-money quiz as a distinct industry trend and decided that Lou Cowan ought to be working for the network. Cowan severed his connections with the show and became vice-president in charge of "creative services."

(Meanwhile, See It Now, as Murrow sadly predicted, lost its weekly slot in the CBS lineup.)

Picking Up the Pieces in Saugerties

Lloyd Snow of Saugerties surveys his abbreviated front porch at 135 W. Bridge Street residence, shorn early Saturday morning by a 1973 pickup truck that continued on to an abrupt halt against Richard Martin's brick house just down the 9W hill. Snow was abruptly awakened at 1:50 a.m. when the truck, driven by Donald E. Herdman, 48, of 7473 Glasco Turnpike, Saugerties, slammed into the house front. Herdman was ticketed by Saugerties village police for driving while intoxicated. (Freeman photo)

10 Years Ago Today . . . We Were Really in the Dark

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ten years ago today, 30 million people in the northeastern United States and Canada were plunged into darkness by the world's worst electrical failure.

The blackout struck in the 5:28 p.m. gloom of a November evening as hundreds of thousands of office workers were heading for home. Many were stranded in subways, on trains, in elevators. Traffic jams snarled highways and streets.

Emergency power generators kicked in at hospitals, police stations and communication centers. In thousands of dark apartments and offices, persons groped through closets and drawers for flashlights and candles.

And for 3 to 13 hours of the Great Blackout of Nov. 9-10, 1965, the candle was king.

It was a perfect plot for a catastrophe movie. But with only one catch—there was no panic, no rioting, no deaths attributed to the darkness. Millions just stopped where they were and stayed cool. Students of mass behavior said—with some astonishment—that the blackout brought out the best in people, bringing them closer together as human beings caught in the same mess.

And years later, a favorite conversation opener is still, "Where were you when the lights went out?"

The anecdotes are numberless. There were the bootblack and the businessman standing back to back directing traffic at the busy intersection in mid-town Manhattan.

There was the Westchester executive who led a trainload of commuters trapped in a tunnel outside Grand Central Station up a ladder and through a manhole on Park Avenue.

And there were the thousands of parties in restaurants and bars that stretched into the dawn, long after the last of the ice had melted and the candles had guttered down.

Can it happen again? Utility and energy experts think not but they are far from certain.

The electrical blackout that quickly spread across eight states and part of the province of Ontario was caused by a tiny relay switch at Ontario Hydro's Sir Adam Beck station at Queenstown, Ont., near Niagara Falls.

Walkill Plane Is 'Totoled'

NEWBURGH

State police and Federal Aviation Administration officials are trying to figure out why a Walkill man's single engine airplane crashed under sunny skies Saturday near the Ulster-Orange County line.

Pronounced in "stable" condition at St. Luke's Hospital, Newburgh, late Saturday was the plane's owner and licensed pilot Robert L. Gillespie, 56, of R.D. 2, Walkill. Police said Gillespie, who was found conscious in the wreckage of his Piper Cub, was admitted to the hospital's Special Care Unit with possible fractured cervical vertebrae, internal injuries and lacerations.

The aircraft was described as "totoled." There were no passengers. State police from Newburgh, as well as Newburgh Town Police, responded at about 11:45 a.m. to find the light plane crashed in a wooded area just off Route 32, about 2/10 mile south of the Ulster County line.

The plane had taken down several telephone lines in descent, but did not ignite. Plattkill Volunteer Firemen washed down the accident scene.

Police said Gillespie's aircraft, with a home base at Kobelt Airport in Shawangunk, was en route from Dutchess County Airport to Orange County Airport.

Investigation is continuing by state police BCI from Newburgh and by Earl Morrow, FAA inspector of Teterboro Airport, N.J.

The cupboard was bare when a would-be robber attempted to make off with the proceeds late Friday night of Art's Deli in Jefferson Heights, Catskill, according to state police.

Leeds troopers reported Dolores Seeley, middle aged proprietor of the neighborhood store, was struck from behind with an unknown object at about 11:30 p.m. when closing up for the night. The assailant, still at large, then reportedly checked the cash register and found it empty, so he left. Receipts had been deposited earlier.

Mrs. Seeley was treated for lacerations of the head and eye at nearby Greene County Memorial Hospital.

Police described the assailant a white male, about 5-6, medium build, wearing a green fatigue jacket.

A Poughkeepsie man was arrested on the Bard College campus early Saturday and charged with unauthorized use of a motor vehicle reportedly taken Friday from Fishkill.

Rhinebeck state police turned James Haynes, 22, of 315 South Clinton Street, over to troopers in Fishkill on the charge. He was not a Bard student, police said.

A Canal Street one-car accident sent two Ellenville men to the hospital in the early hours Saturday morning, and the driver was ticketed for unreasonable speed and a bald tire.

Village police said driver Tommie Steele, 45, of 8 Canal Street, reported being "run off the road" by another auto at 1:30 a.m. Steele drove off the right side of Canal Street about 500 feet east of Greenfield Road, struck two telephone poles and a village sign before coming to a halt. He and passenger, Hayward Terry, 36, were treated for injuries at Ellenville Community Hospital. Steele was reportedly unconscious when found by police.

Home to 'Forget'

DUBLIN, Ireland (UPI) — Dutch industrialist Tiede Herrema flew home to the Netherlands Saturday to "forget the terrible experience" of 36 days captivity at the mercy of two desperate kidnapers.

In his pocket he carried a bullet, a last grim souvenir from his captors, who threw down their guns Friday night and surrendered to encircling police.

"I will carry it always as a reminder of how lucky I am to be alive," the chief executive of the Dutch-owned Ferenka company said.

Herrema, his wife Elizabeth and 17-year-old son Ytze flew home aboard a private twin-engine aircraft. They were cheered by a crowd of about 500 persons when they arrived at Zesthoven airport near Rotterdam. Herrema, looking pale, greeted the crowd with a smile.

At a hearing before a special criminal court later in the day, kidnaper Eddie Gallagher, 27, angrily accused the Irish Republican Army of informing on him and his woman accomplice, 19-year-old Marian Coyle.

Karen Ruling Due Monday

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (UPI) — A New Jersey judge is expected to announce Monday whether the respirator that has kept 21-year-old Karen Ann Quinlan alive for six months may be shut off so she may "die in dignity."

Miss Quinlan's adoptive parents, who requested the court action, will sit down with Judge Robert Muir Jr. and attorneys opposing the request in Muir's chambers at 1:30 p.m. Monday.

Muir's law clerk, David Anderson, said copies of the judge's 50-page opinion will be distributed to newsmen 45 minutes later.

The Quinlans want to turn off the respirator that has kept Karen alive in an irreversible coma for six months. Joseph Quinlan has asked the court to make him Karen's legal guardian with the express purpose of removing her from the respirator.

Paul W. Armstrong, the family's attorney, said the Quinlans would hold a news conference after the opinion is issued.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

In Killing of Rosendale Man*Vogt Says Rumors 'Distorted'

KINGSTON — Noting that since the killing of Kenneth Taylor, 21, of Rosendale and the arrest of six youths in the case stories have been circulating that Taylor was tortured, mutilated and emasculated, District Attorney Francis J. Vogt has refuted the rumors, terming them "widely distorted."

Explaining that the distortions have caused much unrest "and even some hysteria in some parts of the community," and that there have been some reports of harassment against the parents of two of the defendants, Vogt on Friday publicly disclosed the facts in the case.

According to the district attorney, the evidence received by his office shows that on the day the homicide occurred (Oct. 30) one of the six defendants enticed Taylor into a van which also carried the other five defendants.

"It was the alleged purposed of these defendants to subject the victim to a beating over a transaction that had happened months previously," Vogt said. "The evidence further shows that the victim was pummeled by several of the defendants while being driven to a remote area in Port Ewen. There, he was pulled out of the van and struck several more times."

According to Vogt, at the conclusion of the alleged beating, one of the defendants pulled a knife out of his pocket and stabbed Taylor in the thigh.

"Unfortunately, the knife struck the victim's femoral artery," the D.A. said. "The defendants then returned to the van and drove away. There was no evidence that anyone realized the seriousness of the victim's condition. The autopsy protocol shows no mutilation of the victim other than the aforementioned stab wound and the bruises, contusions and abrasions which were a result of the beating."

Asked whether characterizations of the homicide as "particularly brutal" were accurate, Vogt said, "I would not characterize this as the most brutal slaying we have had in Ulster County by any stretch of the imagination. This is certainly bad enough as it is without making it worse."

Vogt explained that should no new evidence turn up, it is expected that manslaughter charges against five of the youths will be dropped, adding that they may be charged with assault instead. To date, the evidence shows that Taylor died of excessive bleeding from the stab wound, he said.

The six defendants, Joseph Buboltz, 17, of 277 Salem Street, Port Ewen; his brother, Kevin, 16, of the same address; Gary S. Kithcart, 19, of 235 Salem Street; John F. Genther, 16, of Clay Road, Port Ewen; Anthony J. Russo, 19, of Main Street, St. Remy; and Ralph N. Wade, 20, of 85 Wurts Street, Kingston, were ordered held for grand jury action at a court appearance last Wednesday. A large crowd gathered outside the Town of Esopus courtroom, from which the press and public were excluded during the proceedings. Joseph Buboltz was held without bail; bail on the remaining five defendants was set at $5,000 each.

Concerning some criticism of the exclusion of the press from the hearing, Vogt explained that since some of the defendants were between the ages of 16 and 19, they are eligible for youthful offender treatment.

"Under such circumstances, when a defense attorney makes an application that the courtroom be closed, the judge under the Criminal Procedure Law, has little or no alternative but to grant the request and this office (the DA's office) has no standing to object," Vogt said.

June in January

No, it was more like April in November. Although there were few people about to enjoy this view along the Maiden Lane side of Academy Green, Saturday was a balmy day in Kingston. In New York City, the temperature climbed to a record 76 degrees in Central Park, breaking the previous record of 72. The warm weather extended over much of the eastern two-thirds of the country, with bathers in Chicago relaxing on the sand along the shores of Lake Michigan. (Freeman photo)

City Charter, Old City Hall Issues*Two Decisively Beaten

KINGSTON — Unofficial returns from the city clerk's office show that the two questions on the ballot last Tuesday for city voters — a new city charter and restoration of the old city hall — were decisively defeated.

Figures compiled by City Clerk Louis F. DeCicco, based on duplicates of tally sheets from the city's 26 districts, show that the proposition to spend up to $1 million on restoration and parking for the old city hall, drew just over 7,500 votes with 4,306 persons voting against it and 3,251 voting in favor.

The city charter badly defeated with just under 7,000 votes cast, 4,902 against it and 2,079 in favor.

Voting was relatively heavy on both issues although light compared to percentages wracked up in the mayoral race. Just over 78 per cent of the eligible voters cast their ballots for mayor while 59 per cent voted on the city hall issue and 55 per cent on the city charter question.

The fates of both issues remain open, however. The city hall, vacant since the city government left it in 1972, is a national landmark and could be the recipient of up to $500,000 in state restoration funds if the city government decides to spend any money for it.

Mayor Francis R. Koenig has called for revision of the city's 1896 charter in his last three Mayor's Messages and said during his campaign that if the charter were defeated he would appoint another charter revision commission.

Van Doren Not Only Culprit in Quiz Scandal

The $64,000 Question became one of the most imitated shows in television history. The Big Surprise was brought in before the end of 1955, and CBS followed its own success with The $64,000 Challenge. There were others, including High Finance, Treasure Hunt — and NBC's Twenty-One.

Charles Van Doren, a young, pleasant-looking Columbia University English instructor, son and nephew of distinguished writer-scholars Mark and Carl Van Doren, was the biggest thing that hit Twenty-One. A shy but knowledgeable contestant, Van Doren defeated a strong but unpopular champion, Herbert Stempel, who had appeared to be unbeatable. Twenty-One began to vie with the two CBS shows, which stayed at or near the top of the weekly ratings. Van Doren became a national hero; the audience would suffer with him in the isolation booth as his face showed the strain of his mental search for the right answer — which he often came up with only at the last split second.

But Stempel, the man Van Doren had defeated, was unhappy — more than that, he was suspicious. In August 1958 he charged that Twenty-One was fixed. Anxiety and fear rippled through the network executive offices. Lou Cowan, now president of the CBS Television Network, grew concerned.

Cowan called the producers of CBS's two $64,000 shows and, taking a "Hey, you guys aren't cheating over there, are you?" attitude, was told what he wanted to hear — "absolutely not." He says he told the producers that their shows had to be 100 per cent honest. Then he reported to his superiors at CBS that they had better have detectives check it out. The detectives reportedly came back with nothing. ***

Charles Van Doren, after an aimless and agonizing drive through New England with his wife at his side, went to Washington. There, before members of a House of Representatives special subcommittee on legislative oversight, he read a long statement that began with the sad admission:

"I would give almost anything I have to reverse the course of my life in the last three years... I have deceived my friends, and I had millions of them."

Albert Freedman, producer of Twenty-One, had coached Van Doren on the scheduled questions and the answers. He coached Van Doren on the pregnant pause, and suggested that he answer some parts of certain questions first and the more difficult parts at the end.

Van Doren wasn't the only culprit in what came to be known as the Quiz Scandal. New York District Attorney Frank Hogan said that of 150 witnesses called in an investigation into the matter, "maybe fifty" told the truth. Though the NBC show claimed the big bad headlines, CBS was not to be let off scot-free. Production people from both The $64,000 Question and The $64,000 Challenge told the congressional investigators that the sponsor, Revlon, gave orders to get rid of certain unpopular contestants — one way or the other. ***

ton took full responsibility and went to Washington. Before Congress and the nation Stanton made what amounted to a confession:

I want to say here and now that I was completely unaware, until August 8, 1958, of any irregularity in the quiz shows on our network. When gossip about quiz shows in general came to my attention, I was assured by our television-network people that these shows were completely above criticism of this kind... It is now clear that I should have gone further... This has been a bitter pill for us to swallow.

Stanton's stand was statesmanlike. But somebody else had to take the rap. Louis George Cowan, the granddaddy of the quiz shows, was the logical fall guy. Cowan was asked to resign, but since he had severed all connections with the $64,000 organization before he joined CBS and was "clean," he refused to do so.

There was, of course, considerable speculation as to whether the top people at CBS — not only Lou Cowan, but also Frank Stanton and Bill Paley — knew that there had been some tampering with the quiz shows. The top echelon says not. But this denial is accepted with considerable skepticism by another quiz-show entrepreneur, one who never went into the business of producing big-money shows:

Anybody who knew anything about this business had to understand that you couldn't maintain that kind of hyperbolic drama with real people without fixing the shows. What happens if the little shoe-maker gets up there and fails to answer a question on the first day? What happens if the lady who wins several hundred dollars says she doesn't want to go on; that she wants to use the money for a down payment on a car? It became unbelievable that a person who had no money at all would risk, say, $8,000. To build the suspense, you had to screw around with reality... taking advantage of the public's willingness to believe it's all real, suggesting that a penniless old shoemaker would risk all that money.

It is my complete conviction that network people at the top level knew what was going on. The people who bought the shows and saw it happening just had to know. You don't get away up there in the executive offices by being dumb.

It may be that CBS was clean in the quiz scandals. (NBC, on the other hand, told the answers "without shame," claiming "it's just entertainment.") Then why did Stanton make his Washington confession? There was a feeling in the halls of CBS that contestants on some of the cheapie daytime quizzes were probably coached. Were this discovered, CBS would never be believed in arguing that the big money shows were straight.

Firings to serve the convenience of the moment have never been uncommon at CBS. Cowan had been in the hospital with phlebitis. When he returned he found Executive Vice-President James Aubrey installed in the office between Paley and Stanton. Aubrey was named president of the network in December 1959, after Lou Cowan was dismissed by Stanton.

Nobody Really Loses at the 'Grand Old Game' of Politics

NUMBERS GAME—One of the more endearing endorsements about politics and the thing that keeps some of its less successful practitioners at the game despite apparent rejection by the electorate is that no one ever really loses an election. It's called the numbers game as in figures lie and liars figure and any politician worth a handshake is adept at it.

Since the most recent election was last Tuesday, why not pick out a few numbers from that historic event.

We'll have to preface this by offering the following information: this is written on Friday afternoon and on Friday afternoon the board of elections had yet to come forth with "official figures" from Tuesday's elections. It has been a difficult year for the board of elections.

First of all, let's take the Koenig-Darling-Singer race for mayor.

Koenig won a clearcut victory. There was no impounding of voting machines on that one, no demand for recounts. Thirty-two-hundred-vote wins tend to rule out such grasping at straws as in "why embarrass yourself any further."

The question here is not did Koenig win—we all know that—but did Bill Darling and Bernie Singer really lose. And the answer, of course, is no they did not.

Here's why, if you're inclined to listen to the other side. Koenig's "normal plurality" is around 4,000 votes; Darling and Singer combined held him to 1,700 plurality. Ergo, they "won" by 2,300.

Koenig, of course, knows how to figure things. He tells us that running against two candidates, his plurality didn't really suffer that much. He beat Jim Tyrrell by 3,900 in 1969 with Singer picking up another 1,200. Do some subtracting and there's 1,700 again. Note: We didn't say political figuring made sense.

OUT IN THE COUNTY, Lew Kirschner lost to Albert Spada by about 5,000 votes. No recounts there; 5,000 is heavy. Not, however, if you're on the losing end.

Lew Kirschner figures with a little more help from his friends and the Conservative nomination, he just might have pulled it off. The Conservative nomination went to Bill Hegeman who went home with it. Still, there were enough people around who vote Conservative regardless of what the candidate does or doesn't do to give Hegeman some 2,700.

Kirschner quickly subtracts that from Spada's plurality and comes up with 2,300. Now that's close. If Kirschner doesn't get himself entangled with Sheriff Martin politics last year—remember, Lew dumped Martin—and if the city committee doesn't return the favor, he wins.

Maybe. No maybes about this though. The county Republican chairman should win by 15,000, not 5,000 and those figures should be pause for deep concern.

Back in town, the race for alderman-at-large was taken about on face value with almost no one arguing figures. Bobby Gallo didn't mention numbers because for Bobby Gallo they weren't so hot—2,200 and change is not a typical Gallo win.

Emily Johnson may not be a "politician" but she does display a keen understanding of the grand old game. Mrs. Johnson suggests that if anyone is going to beat what she and her running mate referred to as the "Koenig-Gallo Machine" they will have to do it the day after election, not a month before.

Republicans have been saying that since 1967. The fact that no one follows that advice is one of the prime reasons why Democrats have been winning big in this allegedly Republican town for the past ten years.

And in the town of Ulster, we have Carmine Sabino slipping in by less than two dozen votes. The figures there speak for themselves. Sixty per cent of the people voted against Sabino but yet Sabino wins. Credit Bob Stedje, the Conservative (this year) for keeping Carmine in the driver's seat. Carmine should be very grateful to Stedje: he pulled the same maneuver (the third man routine) to guarantee Sabino the Republican nomination last summer.

The bottom line on figures might be this: whatever figures to be the thing to do.

COUNCIL CAPERS—Mike Hawkins made a surprisingly strong run in the Third Ward, polling 112 votes on the Independent line, according to unofficial results. Even more surprising was the type of campaign Hawkins ran and its results. Hawkins, 26, blamed "the establishment" for what's wrong with the world and our ity and his ward. That included

City Beat

By Hugh Reynolds
Freeman City Hall Reporter

blaming Brian Smith, the outgoing Republican, for Vietnam. You giggle? 112 people agreed with him.

While in the Third Ward, one can never overlook Ray Armater, the Whiz of Washington Avenue. Ray got his man Joe Markle ("Baby Ray") elected this year and is said to be looking to higher things. Like city chairman. Ray waxes ambitious after every election so we'll have to see this one to believe it.

Pete Mancuso won easily in the 12th Ward, but why not? — his opponent withdrew before the election. Such statements are not really fair to Pete, who hit every house in the Ward and probably would have beaten anyone the Republicans put up regardless of whether they withdrew or not. What's interesting about the 12th Ward is that despite the fact Gwen Wood announced her "withdrawal," 140 people voted for her. We can only assume that Mrs. Wood has 140 very good friends in the ward.

Kay Cole, running as a Conservative in the First Ward, ran smack into one of those really difficult facts of political life—not everyone who says they will vote for you in fact votes for you. Mrs. Cole, a solid campaigner, thought she had at least 400 votes in the bag. She was left holding the bag, finishing third with somewhere around 200.

EMILIO PRIMO continues to lead a charmed life in the Eighth Ward, bending to his opposition but never quite breaking. "Junie," as he's known, snuck in by less than a dozen this year but as they say in the game, one's as good as a hundred.

Bernie Sims, on the other hand, returned with relish. No hotdog, Bernie, he waged a quiet but effective campaign.

A few words about the departing 13th Ward alderman, Hank Dreiser. Hank was his own man in the Council; no rubber stamp, Hank Dreiser. And losing to Bernie Sims, one of the more popular aldermen ever to serve the 13th Ward, is no sin.

Along the same lines, Barbara Burnett over in the Sixth Ward has nothing to be ashamed of in losing to Don Quick.

Quick is kind of a mini-Koenig in the Sixth, a subject of some controversy, supposedly vulnerable but always King of the Hill when the votes are counted. Mrs. Burnett will return to her YWCA activities (president) where she has done Yeoman (or is it "yeoperson" now?) work for many years.

Overall, we'd say the caliber of competition in the aldermanic races was up this year. And that's good news for everybody.

ROLL CALL

WASHINGTON, D.C.

"The bills came due" for Congress last week but the House, by an emphatic 217-178 vote, rejected an administration sponsored measure to raise the temporary debt ceiling by $20 billion.

Historically, Congress has almost always passed measures raising the ceiling high enough to accommodate federal spending obligations. The administration wanted it raised to $597 billion.

Congressmen Hamilton Fish Jr. (R-25th) and Benjamin A. Gilman (R-26th) voted with the majority on the bill while Congressman Matthew F. McHugh (D-27th) voted with the minority.

McHugh and Fish were in agreement on a bill that strengthens the rights of federal civilian employees who are being investigated for misconduct on the job. Gilman voted against. Final vote was 217-163. Opponents thought the wording was vague.

Ulster's three congressmen were in the majority on a bill to authorize $240 million for the nation's railroads, the bulk of it going to bankrupt railroads in the northeast, such as Penn Central. Final vote was 261-129.

In the senate, the promotion of the Air Force general who falsified records in order to conceal the illegal bombing of North Vietnam in 1972 was approved by a 49-43 vote.

The Senate voted to retain an amendment that would allocate $3.5 million to reimburse the cost of protection of visiting dignitaries. Opponents saw it as another "bail out" of New York City since the law provides that only cities with more than 20 foreign embassies would be eligible. Houston, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Chicago and New Orleans would qualify at present.

Javits and Buckley voted in favor of the measure.

WASHINGTON — Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., will attempt to lay open hundreds of assassination documents which have been hidden for the past 12 years.

In earlier columns, we revealed that the FBI had withheld from the Warren Commission many documents dealing with the John F. Kennedy assassination.

Investigators for Abzug's Government Information Subcommittee have also learned that the National Archives has held back numerous Warren Commission documents from the public, including the actual minutes of two of the commission's 12 executive sessions.

One of the suppressed transcripts contains an analytical discussion by psychiatrists of Lee Harvey Oswald's conduct and motives. The accused assassin's relationship with his wife was discussed in such explicit terms that the Archives felt the transcript violated the Oswalds' privacy.

The other transcript, involving Oswald's stay in the Soviet Union, was based on statements by Soviet defector Yuri Nosenko. It was withheld at the request of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Similar requests from federal agencies have kept secret 142 other items at the Archives, including 95 from the FBI, 24 from the CIA and small numbers from the State Department, Secret Service and Internal Revenue Service.

Other internal memos, betraying the timidity of the commission and the failure of its staff to follow up leads, were also never released.

Those familiar with the suppressed documents insist they contain no evidence that would change the commission's verdict that Oswald acted alone. On the contrary, some insiders believe the documents would clear up questions that have been raised and would help end the wild speculation over the Kennedy assassination.

RUMSFELD'S FUTURE: Republican leaders are sizing up Donald Rumsfeld, the new choice for Defense Secretary, as a vice presidential possibility.

At age 43, he is articulate and photogenic. He demonstrated as the White House staff chief that he is also an able administrator. But most of all, he has a style that has caused admiring politicians to refer to him as the Republican John F. Kennedy.

We have determined that President Ford hasn't spoken to Rumsfeld about becoming his running mate next year. But other White House aides are whispering about the possibility.

Ford has had his eye on Rumsfeld ever since moving into the White House. As we reported on October 8, 1974, the President then had Rumsfeld "in mind to be the next Secretary of Defense."

We reported a year ago, however, that Ford "needed someone in a hurry to replace Alexander Haig who had headed former President Nixon's White House staff. The President, therefore, summoned Rumsfeld."

We added that "Ford still intends to send the able Rumsfeld to preside over the Pentagon." We noted that "the President's plans for Rumsfeld, of course, means Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger will be dropped from the cabinet. This will be a victory for Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who has been feuding with Schlesinger over foreign-military policy."

Our report of a year ago has now come true. The Pentagon, of course, can be a tough test for any administrator. Rumsfeld himself remarked ruefully to a friend: "The Pentagon is like a log covered with ants floating down the river. Each ant thinks he's doing it."

But those who know Rumsfeld believe he will emerge from the Pentagon as a political star and vice presidential prospect.

INDIAN DEALING: For years we have been writing about the victimization of Indians. The villain in our pieces has been the Interior Department, whose Bureau of Indian Affairs has a record of bungling and betrayal.

On most reservations, the Interior Department has found Indian leaders who will do its bidding. The worst of them is Dick Wilson, whom Interior maintains in power as the Oglala Sioux tribal chairman even though the Civil Rights Commission reports his election was shot through with illegalities and fraud.

The controversial Wilson is also under federal indictment for allegedly using a "goon squad" to beat up lawyers defending the Indians who oppose him.

Yet the Interior Department remains loyal to him. For example, an Interior Task Force conducted a study on the Pine Ridge Reservation, site of the Wounded Knee siege of 1873, where Wilson holds sway. The study found that "the issue of treaty rights must be addressed. The emotional state surrounding this issue demands that it be addressed."

The question of treaty rights is the key issue that divides Wilson's supporters and opponents. The statement in the study backs Wilson's opponents. The Interior Department, therefore, struck out this demand for a review of the disputed 1868 treaty with the Oglala Sioux.

Stan Duremas, chairman of the Task Force, tried to defend this censorship. The treaty issue, he claimed, "is important to (only) a small group."

We have also discovered tampering with a second study. This was an investigation of Wilson's tribal government, conducted by the prestigious Touche Ross and Company. The study concluded that Wilson's government was "not a viable working body."

But in a private memo, Interior's assistant solicitor for Indian affairs, Charles Soller, said this finding would "create . . . embarrassment" for the Department. So the tough language of Touche Ross was changed.

Some ERA Answers

Tuesday's overwhelming defeat of the state's proposed equal rights amendment points up the difficulties yet to be overcome in adoption of the ERA to the United States Constitution — an amendment the Freeman vigorously supports.

Proponents still have until the spring of 1979 to round up the four additional states necessary for ratification and adoption of the federal ERA, but it is becoming increasingly obvious that those final few states will be hard to persuade.

Most Americans favor adoption of an amendment mandating equal rights for women. Pollsters say the majority is as much as 3-1 in favor of the ERA.

But equal rights for women has been caught up in such related — but often misrepresented — issues as abortion, military service and divorce. Therein lies the pressure on many state legislators to avoid or vote down the ERA.

The answers to some of the most commonly asked questions about ERA are as follows:

- The ERA WOULD NOT destroy labor laws designed to protect women, but provide health and safety protection for all workers.

- Women WOULD NOT lose their support or alimony rights, nor would husband and wife be required to contribute identical amounts of money to a marriage.

- The ERA WOULD STILL allow states to ban homosexual marriages, as long as the sanction applied to men as well as women. The amendment WOULD NOT change Supreme Court rulings on abortion.

- If there is ever again a forced draft of individuals into the military, IT WOULD apply to both sexes. However, once in the service, men and women would be assigned duties depending on their qualifications.

- The ERA WOULD NOT eliminate such facilities reasonably separated by sex as rest rooms or sleeping quarters in public institutions.

- Such institutions as the Girl Scouts or private schools designed to serve one sex still WOULD BE allowed.

- Athletic teams made up of one sex would be legal as long as schools provided equal sports facilities for both sexes.

The 27th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution would simply guarantee the equal rights could not be denied or abridged on account of sex.

The Freeman urges those who still have questions about this most important proposal to contact the Citizens Advisory Council on the Status of Women, in Washington.

This commission was established by presidential order and has answers to all the questions involving the Equal Rights Amendment.

A Sense of Relief

The Freeman shares the relief of court officials, attorneys and principals that a complete trial for Dr. William Abruzzi of New Paltz was not required.

The famed "Rock Festival" doctor was accused of having sexual relations with a woman patient while she was under anesthetic in his Wappingers Falls office. He pleaded guilty to the charge as the trial was about to begin.

The defendant's decision to plead guilty averted testimony that would have been embarrassing to the woman involved.

Although the trial ended before it began, The Freeman feels that the cause of justice has been served.

'But . . . I'm Still A Growing Boy'

By William F. Buckley

Count me in, please, among the bereaved by the loss of James Schlesinger. Along with just about everyone else, I deem Henry Kissinger the most persuasive advocate in the republic, and inasmuch as his policies — as distinguished from his motivations — are in my judgment wrongheaded, I sometimes wish he were less lucky, less eloquent, though one takes pride in the sonority of his prose and the craftsmanship of his arguments.

Schlesinger, incredibly, is in the same league. All the more painful that he should be dropped from the Cabinet — for the sole purpose, if we are to take President Ford at his word, of creating a team with which Mr. Ford feels comfortable. There are those of us who would prefer that Mr. Ford endure a little discomfort, rather than that he should strive so successfully to cause the Soviet Union to be comfortable. The elimination of Schlesinger will in all likelihood create a new Soviet holiday.

It happens that a fortnight ago I met the Secretary of Defense and asked him a few questions the answers to which are especially pertinent under the circumstances . . .

Q. Are you affected by the crystallizing ethic of the Sixties: namely that the Secretary of Defense, like the Secretary of State, is morally bound by the foreign policy (they administer?). Or is it your idea of a civil servant that one doesn't permit oneself to ask that question (about a policy dictated from above)?

Mr. Schlesinger. Certainly not the latter. I think that you have two questions there. The first was: Could a public official carry out a policy that happened, for a variety of historical reasons, to have earned the disapprobation of the intellectual community?

The answer to that is, certainly, It's one responsibility, if the policy is in the national interest and it is right to carry it out. On the other hand, if one has moral misgivings of one's own of a serious nature, one has the obligation to withdraw.

The next question asked whether there is an ethical distortion between the responsibilities of the civil servant and the policy-maker — between the corporal and the Secretary of Defense.

Mr. Schlesinger. The policy maker, if he disagrees with policy in a serious way, should depart.

Q. Is the Secretary of Defense ex officio a policy maker?

Mr. Schlesinger. That's correct . . . If the forces under his command or under his scrutiny are being used in a way which he regards as inappropriate and he has no sympathy with the policy, he should turn the office over to somebody who does have sympathy with the policy, because he would be ineffective in carrying it out.

Q. From which we may infer that you were not out of sympathy with our policy when you became Secretary of Defense?

S. That is correct. Having identified himself as entirely in accord with the United States effort in South Vietnam, Mr. Schlesinger paused to deliberate the effects of our failure there.

S. I think that it's clear, in terms of our own policies, that the patience of the U.S. public for a protracted conflict, apparently unsuccessful, is quite limited and that consequently our own policies should be geared not to that kind of protracted conflict, that a military engagement should not be permitted with the involvement of American forces to extend over many years; and that that requires an alteration in our strategy. In Vietnam we had, we thought, the staying power. It turned out not to be the case. And I think that we can draw that conclusion with regard to our own policies, and I suspect that other governments will draw what inferences they will from this experience.

A Dangerous Breast Cancer Program

Berry's World

In case you missed this bizarre Associated Press dispatch out of Tucson, Ariz., you would not know that "A bankiere wired with heat sensors and a memory bank that can hopefully detect breast cancer is in its early stages of development here. The bra is the brain child of Dr. L.M. Boone of the University of Arizona Medical Center."

Dr. Boone's work is in line with the direction of the cancer industry which is also bending its efforts to improve methods of breast cancer detection. However, most of Dr. Boone's colleagues in this voyage of discovery are not placing their hopes in diagnostic clothing but in mammography, that is breast X-rays.

Twenty-seven centers or demonstration projects have been set up to make yearly mammograms of thousands of women 35 years of age or older. Those master manipulators of terror and hope at the American Cancer Society are confident that the results from the program will help the Society to make good on its promise to kill cancer before it kills us.

SUSPICIONS GROW

Let's hope so; but people are getting suspicious of the cancer industry, its research programs, its therapies and its other manifestations. Its optimistic interpretations of the death and morbidity statistics have been seriously challenged, with some going so far as to say that in reality only the most marginal progress has been achieved since the end of the World War II.

Be that as it may, enough hopes have been raised and left unfulfilled so that the status of the cancer expert is in danger of going the way of the prestige once accorded to psychiatrists and economists. Certainly there are enough reasonable doubts about the cancer industry's reliability to warrant a public debate before millions of women may be suckered into participation in a new, mass medical program.

A task force of English medical people ("British Medical Journal," Aug. 9, 1975) is dubious: "In our opinion there is insufficient evidence concerning its effectiveness to justify the initiation of a national programme of breast screening."

In America there are misgivings also. The National Cancer Institute's John C. Bailor, III, M.D., Ph.D., has circulated a draft of a paper called "Mammography — A Contrary View." While the paper is still "subject to change," Dr. Bailor writes at the end of his review of the data on this subject: "I regretfully conclude there seems to be a possibility that the routine use of mammography in screening asymptomatic women may eventually take almost as many lives as it saves."

Bailor's concern is that the X-rays themselves can cause the very cancers they are being used to detect. The answer to his objection is that the X-ray dosages in these examinations are very small, but experience indicates that, as a program of this sort is made massive and national, faulty equipment operators may combine to give women larger than necessary amounts of radiation. Twenty percent of X-ray units inspected by the government in 1972 were emitting excessive amounts of radiation, while another government study in 1970 estimated that in over half of diagnostic usage the X-ray beam is larger than necessary.

AGE OF SUBMISSION

The next question is at what age women should be urged to submit to mammographic examination. On this point Bailor writes: "Further study will probably confirm present opinions regarding the value of screening older women, but may show that the minimum age should be at least 60 to 65 years, not 50 as recommended by some authors, and certainly not the 35-year limit widely used at present."

There seems to be no data that women in the 35 to 50 age groups will benefit from a program of this sort. But there may be positive harm if they go get a mammogram every year since, each time they do, they're getting that much more X-ray radiation.

That brings up another unanswered point. Why annual mammogram? The 12-month period seems to have been picked on the analogy that we do other important things like paying taxes once a year. The National Cancer Institute originally recommended urging women to come in every other year, thus subjecting them to but half the X-ray dosages with perhaps the same benefits.

On top of all that, Bailor remarks that mammograms don't seem to be very accurate. They, or the people who read them, find several times as many growths in women's breasts as there eventually turn out to be. The worry, anxiety and fear women with false positive reports must go through has to be something fierce; that it should also be unnecessary is cruel.

Mammography does have one indisputable advantage: it's expensive, and doctors like to waste money every bit as much as Air Force generals.

As a technique, current information suggests, the use of mammography may hold some promise for screening certain selected groups of women who, there is good reason to believe, are at abnormally high risk of breast cancer. The way things are going however, it looks like we are getting into another costly, possibly dangerous, probably ineffective medical fad.

Questions unasked at this point, to which however the former Secretary of Defense may in due course vouchsafe his answers:

Q. What inferences will our allies draw from your dismissal?

Q. Even as there is an obligation to withdraw if one is not in sympathy with the policies of an administration, is there a surviving obligation — having withdrawn, or been dismissed — to express one's misgivings about current policies?

Crime by 'Nice Guys'

Editor, The Freeman:

The most successful criminal activity surpassing street crime, without guns or burglary tools, is from some of the nice guys.

You may call it white collar crime — a self-justified dishonesty — from secret thievery, such as shop lifting, cheating, stealing schemes, defraud, which puts a costly burden on the economy, our freedom and purses. All white collar citizens are not criminals but they include butchers, embezzling bank employees, price fixing politicians, executives, gyp mechanics and the oil cartels etc. These ripoffs cover padded medical costs, stock securities, mail order insurance, door-to-door salesmen and there is no aspect of life that has not been exploited by some white collars and blue collars, not excluded.

These average people may be solid citizens, oriented-church-going with no previous criminal record, and they are seldom caught much less prosecuted. It's a world wide problem even in socialist and communist countries.

Statistics show we have 75 million shop lifters in U.S. costing honest people 40 to 50 billion a year, and it's a virtuous right being dishonest and not getting caught. It's the national sport because—if anyone else does it why can't I?

Then there is the dishonesty tax you pay to cover these thefts and other dubious practices.

Upholds Equal Time

Editor, The Freeman:

I take issue with your editorial of November 5 asking that the FCC repeal its equal time ruling. In so doing, I am taking advantage of the 'equal time' afforded your readers in the form of Letters to the Editor. Radio offers no such balance of opinion.

I can only assume that you have very little time to listen to the radio. If you listened regularly to our local "Editorials of the Air" your sensibilities as a newsman would be offended by the irresponsible journalism exercised. Through the years has anyone kept a scorecard of the apologies offered when the truth emerged? How many times have the opinions been challenged? How many times have they been unworthy of comment? And yet the self-righteous voice continues to spew instant opinion, frequently endorsing a popular prejudice.

If this can happen here, and I might add, with no malice on the part of the editorial's author... what could happen in the hands of someone bent on influencing a populace for personal gain or political persuasion? No, don't abolish equal time. There's wisdom in enforcing that balance.

Very truly yours,

Cites Inaccuracies

Editor, The Freeman:

Sunday, October 12, an article entitled "SPCA OPPOSES ARCHERS" found its way to the front page of the Kingston Freeman. The article contained the statement, "A recent winter count of dead deer in Michigan showed that of 74,000 deer carcasses found, 30,000 had died slowly from hunting wounds." Upon reading this article, I immediately wrote a letter to the Department of Natural Resources in Michigan, requesting verification of these statistics.

Though the Michigan letter shows inaccuracies in the SPCA's statement, the most disturbing aspect of the whole situation is that on October 14, the Kingston Freeman wrote an editorial using these inaccuracies. This editorial stated that "The society has released figures from Michigan showing that of 70,000 deer carcasses found, more than 30,000 of them died slowly and painful deaths from arrow wounds that had missed the vital mark."

Not only did the Freeman not take the time to verify the true facts about the SPCA report but they misquoted the SPCA, saying that 30,000 deer died from "arrow" wounds. In the Michigan report, "arrows" were never mentioned.

I think this was irresponsible reporting on the Freeman's part and distortion of the fact on the part of the SPCA.

Yes, I am an avid bowhunter and I can tolerate editorials and comments from organizations in opposition to my sport because this is a free country where everyone is entitled to his own point of view. However, I cannot tolerate misrepresentation of fact and poor reporting, nor should any free-thinking American. Hopefully, in the future, both the Freeman and the SPCA will present the true facts and allow the public to form their own conclusions.

Sincerely,
LOUIS N. FITZPATRICK
Saugerties, N.Y.

Defends the Troopers

Editor, The Freeman:

Attica prisoners resent State Troopers' handling of riot. They claim troopers should have patted them on the back of the hand, instead of violating their civil rights, by firing one shotgun blast into the air.

What civil rights? When a person is sent to prison, it is because they violated another person's civil rights and the subject, upon sentencing, forfeits his own civil rights, so how can their's be violated when they have none?

I give these young men all the credit in the world, when they stormed Attica, outnumbered 20 to 1, they put their lives on the line, and Thank God, none of them were injured.

Stop your crying. If you had kept your nose clean, you would have been on the outside looking in, instead of the other way around.

Let's all of us when we say our prayers at night, ask the Good Lord, to protect all the men who ride the highways and city streets on their tour of duty to protect us, to please send them home safely to their wives and children.

Very truly yours,

Israel Bond Gathering To Hear Former General

KINGSTON

Major General Nechemia Kain, former quartermaster general of the Israel Defense Forces, will speak on behalf of the State of Israel Bond Drive at Temple Emanuel on Wednesday, Nov. 19, at 8 p.m.

Gen. Kain has held many high-ranking posts in the Israel Defense Force. After visits to various western European countries to study their stores and supplies operations, he was appointed military attaché and head of the Ministry of Defense mission in Italy and Switzerland, and served as military attaché in Yugoslavia until the outbreak of the 1967 war.

In 1969, Gen. Kain was named financial advisor to the Chief of Staff and head of the budget branch in the Defense Department, serving in this capacity until he was appointed chief of the quartermaster branch in General Headquarters.

Born in Romania in 1925, he arrived in what was then Palestine in 1941 as an illegal immigrant and was held in the Atlit Transit Camp for one year. In 1942-43, he studied in the Magliel Agricultural School and subsequently worked as a youth coordinator in Hadera and was active in the Haganah, the Jewish defense force under the British mandate. In the War of Liberation he enlisted in the Israeli forces and served as a platoon commander near Givat Haim on the Eastern border. At the end of the war, he was appointed to General Headquarters to supervise the organization of reserves in the Israel Defense Force.

In 1956 he was given a leave of absence but was called back because of the Sinai campaign, in which he served in the General Command. He attended staff college in 1958-59 and later went into the operations branch of the army. In 1961 he received a law degree from the Hebrew University and was put in charge of administration of the supply division.

Gen. Kain is married and the father of a son and a daughter.

Because of urgent economic needs in the wake of the Yom

Kippur War, a $1 billion reconstruction and development bond issue has been floated by the State of Israel, the largest in the history of the Israel Bond Organization. Proceeds from the sale of bonds will make possible the rehabilitation of the war-dislocated economy and the establishment of job opportunities for immigrants. Israel bonds also help finance industrial and agricultural projects, construction of highways and public housing, and exploitation of natural resources.

'The Files'

State Senator Ed Mason with Halina DiMura, his assistant, examines some of the senator's Legislative Questionnaires.

Microscopy Conference

NEW PALTZ
Scientists and engineers from all over the country attended a scanning electron microscopy conference sponsored by the Center for Continuing Education, State University College, New Paltz and held recently at Mohonk Mountain House.

The conference constituted the college's fifth annual Institute in Science and Technology. Dr. Angelos V. Patsis, professor of chemistry and chairman of the department directs the institute.

Twenty-five per cent of the participants were from the Mid-Hudson Valley. The conference also attracted scientists and engineers to New Paltz from such distant states as California, Washington and Colorado. Representatives from Canada were also present. Participants came from hospitals, such as Montefiore Hospital and Frederick Cancer Research Center; universities such as McGill, Yale and Yale School of Medicine, and industry.

This course provides a thorough background of the operating principles of both the scanning electron microscope and the microanalyzer together with applications of these instruments to the physical and biological fields.

Electron microscopes give high magnification but what is important about the scanning electron microscope is that it provides magnification in three dimensions. Laboratory demonstrations supplemented the lectures and familiarized the participants with the instrument and its applications.

The fall institute was developed, Patsis said, to introduce scientists and engineers to new areas in science, technology and instrumentation. SUC New Paltz is the only one of the 64 units of the State University of New York to offer such a program.

HOBART
People in the 48th Senatorial District don't like forced busing or lenient judges or too stringent environmental laws. And they don't like Vice President Rockefeller or Gov. Carey very much, either.

That's what State Senator Edwyn E. Mason says his recent polling of his constituents shows. Mason, who represents the sprawling 48th District, which includes Saugerties, Ulster and the western sections of Ulster County, said he sent out 70,000 questionnaires and got back almost 34,000 responses. It was an unusually high return.

"I'm very pleased at this response," Senator Mason said. "It shows the people have strong opinions and are anxious to respond when questioned on matters of public concern, in which their interests and emotions are involved."

"Experts in surveys and public polls tell us this is an exceptionally high return and they attribute it to the fact that so many of the questions were on controversial subjects close to the deep-rooted feelings and beliefs of the people. "Practically all questions are the result of letters and suggestions from members of the public — naturally a lot of them are controversial — a lot of our citizens are mad, and they've sure got plenty to be mad about."

The vote against forced busing of children was the most overwhelming of any of the questions on the questionnaire. 95.1 percent were against it while only 3.5 percent favor the program, Mason said.

"Public outrage over forced busing for the purpose of racial integration really showed up," Mason said. "One mother demanded 'who are these judges and educators who tell us we can't send our children to a neighborhood school — is this still America? This is like Russia, next these judges will be telling us where we can live and what to eat."

Mason commented, "It's just another example of abuse of power and defiance of the public by these arrogant judges and educators. Americans are not going to stand for it much longer."

'Pleased with this response'

The fact that many voters feel cut off, or denied the right to know about, school budgets is indicated in the survey in which 85.7 per cent of the voters said they wanted a chance to vote upon the city school budgets. And 82.4 per cent said they should have the chance to act similarly upon BOCES budgets as well as the right to vote in BOCES board elections. "I get many complaints from citizens who say they have great difficulty obtaining information on school budgets and expenses particularly on salaries. They certainly have every right to this information, it's their money, they're entitled to know how it's being spent," Mason said.

Other questions to which voters replied with emphasis concerned withholding from publication names of youthful offenders when they commit serious crimes (78 per cent against); giving teachers and public employees the right to strike (75 per cent against); restoring the death penalty for murder convictions (74 per cent in favor); furnishing residences for state university presidents at state expense (93 per cent against); appointing rather than electing judges (78 per cent against); spending public tax monies for the State Council on the Arts (79 per cent against); continuing the Catskill Study Commission for another two years (51.1 per cent against); removing from office judges who consistently show leniency toward criminals (87 per cent in favor). Over 65 per cent replied they did not favor Nelson Rockefeller as President of the United States, and 67 per cent disapproved of Gov. Carey's record to date. "When the people are consulted on matters of public concern, they are happy to respond and express their opinions. To represent the people we've got to consult them and get their opinions, all too often the feelings and wishes of the people are ignored," Mason said.

"I've found our citizens very well informed, and they're usually right — government of the people, by the people and for the people is always the best government."

"These are the reasons why I believe these questionnaires represent the voice of the people," Senator Mason concluded.

Atomic Power Plants

Nobel Scientists Warn of Threat to All

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — The proliferation of atomic power plants will poison the world with radioactive wastes and will push nations closer to nuclear war, two Nobel Prizewinning scientists say. In a joint statement at a legislative hearing, Hannes Alfven, a physicist, and Harold C. Urey, a chemist, argued that large-scale nuclear expansion and the resulting production of toxic plutonium "means the threat of death to all of us." They insisted that the nation's requirements for more power can be attained more easily and cheaply by making better use of the energy it already produces.

Alfven delivered the statement on behalf himself and Urey to a legislative committee hearing on the state nuclear power plants ballot initiative. It contained the harshest attack yet on the expansion of nuclear power that the lawmakers have heard in seven hearings.

The measure, which will be on California's June, 1976 ballot, seeks to halt growth and use of nuclear power plants in the state unless the legislature certifies they are safe. It also attempts to end liability limits of $560 million for reactor owners in the event of a major reactor mishap.

The statement of the two scientists, enthusiastically applauded by an audience of about 200 initiative supporters, attacked commercial nuclear power plants on four fronts.

They said efforts to control tons of toxic radioactive wastes from reactors, especially deadly plutonium, are subject to very complicated technology and human error, meaning the chance of failure.

"The spread of nuclear energy necessarily means a poisoned world," they declared.

Alfven and Urey argued that the sale of reactors to other nations leads to uncontrollable access to the raw materials for building bombs — "In another words, 'atoms for peace' and 'atoms for war' are Siamese twins. Any attempt to avoid nuclear war is futile if we do not fight the nuclear reactors."

She Heard From The Man On The Moon

John Lima Jr. of the Ulster County Sheriff's Department was a guard at the High Flight Space Museum at Kingston Plaza last summer, where Col. James Irwin and moon rocks appeared. He requested a photo for his daughter Amy Lee, 3, and just received an autographed photo from Col. Irwin showing the astronaut on the moon's surface. Of course to Amy (above with family), this news is old hat. After all, men had walked on the moon three years before she was born. (Freeman photo)

Tips for Holiday Mailing

KINGSTON
It's almost that time of year again . . . so Kingston Postmaster Oscar V. Newkirk has offered 12 easy-to-remember tips to assure prompt and proper delivery of Christmas parcels.

A single item in a package should be cushioned with shredded paper, excelsior, compressed tissue paper, cloth or expanded plastic foam.

If two or more items are mailed in the same carton or box, cushioning material should protect all items from contact with each other, and each item should have its own individual inner carton.

Fiberboard containers, including large soap, cereal boxes, etc. larger than the gift being mailed should be cut down to about the size of the gift to minimize shaking and breaking in transit.

Fragile articles must be individually cushioned, and all four sides of the container should be padded with cushioning material.

Tape used to seal containers should be durable and should cover and firmly secure all flaps.

Paper for the outer wrapping should be at least equal in quality and strength to the kraft stock used for grocery bags. Incidentally, such bags, in good condition, provide excellent wrapping when trimmed to the proper size to fit the package snugly.

Wrapped packages also should be secured with strong twine, not ordinary light string. Twine should be knotted at several intersecting points to keep it from loosening. Reinforced packaging tape also is suggested.

All packages that contain delicate articles should be marked — FRAGILE.

Each package should contain the name and address of the person to whom it is being mailed inside the package as well as outside. An address contained inside is insurance that it will be received promptly even if the outside address should become lost or obliterated.

Be sure to put your return address on the package.

And, finally, address the package correctly and legibly. Be sure to include the ZIP Code. (Call your local post office if you don't know your ZIP Code.) Mail with the proper ZIP Code is processed more rapidly.

Be sure to put only one mailing address on the outside of the parcel. Do not address on more than one side.

Cause to Celebrate

PORT EWEN

In stark contrast to the opening day of classes over two months ago, students at Ulster County BOCES recently celebrated American Vocational Education Week with facilities and equipment appropriate for a technological age.

On Sept. 4, the new BOCES vocational center in Port Ewen welcomed first-day students to a world of pounding hammers, crated equipment and all-but-empty classrooms. The two-month race to complete renovations on the new facility in time for the opening day of classes fell short of the mark; while teachers taught and students studied, workmen kept pounding away.

Two weeks ago the renovation work was still underway, but only some minor finishing touches remained. More significantly, students were hard at work on a variety of projects and lessons in 27 separate classrooms and shops.

In the dental assistants' classrooms, students were practicing the ins and outs of oral examinations and dental surgery.

In the welding shop, torches sent sparks flying among shielded beginners.

In the TV and radio repair shop, students probed tubes and wires in search of defects and problems.

The practical nursing classroom was empty; students were receiving first-hand training and experience at Kingston Hospital.

In the carpentry shop, a miniature house took shape in the middle of the floor.

Prior to this year, BOCES classes were scattered among five sites in the Kingston area, none of which provided adequate space for many of the more energetic projects that BOCES officials envisioned.

"Now, there is an entirely different atmosphere than ever before," said Michael Aronica, director of vocational education, "everyone is under roof; both students and teachers got a big lift when we moved in here."

Most of the necessary equipment and supplies have arrived, said Aronica, allowing students to make full use of the expanded facilities in Port Ewen.

Now that the vocational center is '98 per cent complete," said Aronica, an open house and tour for the public will be held Wednesday, Nov. 12 during daytime class hours and from 7-9 in the evening.

Area Briefs

MAYONE

KINGSTON
Ulster County Sheriff Thomas F. Mayone will be the guest speaker at a meeting of the Ulster County Grand Jurors Association to be held Monday, Nov. 10, at 8 p.m. at the Ulster Courthouse in Kingston.

Mayone is slated to speak on the Ulster County Jail and recent improvements made there. He will also answer questions by those in attendance.

The meeting is open to the general public. Persons wishing to join the association or attend the meeting need not have been a grand juror in the past.

Promotions

KINGSTON
The Kingston Indians Drum and Bugle Corps has marked the start of its winter season by announcing the promotion of two of its veteran performers.

Janet (Joyce) Forehand, who has served for three years as a member of the Indians' Color Guard, has been promoted to color sergeant. Andrew Koehn, a flag bearer and rifle twirler for the past three years, has been promoted to rifle sergeant. Both new positions took effect Nov. 2.

Several new additions have also been announced for the staff of instructors. Music director Jeff Mitchell will assume the additional responsibilities of show coordinator and Richard Benward has been added as an assistant percussion instructor.

John Harris will continue as percussion instructor, with assistance from Tom Kelly. Ray Rhodes will serve as assistant music director and Robert Towler will remain as marching and maneuvering instructor, with Bill Reynolds as the assistant.

The past month has seen 36 new corpsmen join the Kingston Indians. The popular marching and musical unit now boasts 44 brassmen, 21 percussionists, 24 guardsmen and seven officers. There are openings for an additional 16 experienced horn players, 14 guardsmen and five percussionists.

Young men and women interested in joining the Kingston Indians should write UPO Box 513, Kingston for information.

County Share

ALBANY
Ulster County will receive $1,506,154 as its share of $99.69 million being distributed for November to 57 Social Service districts in the state.

The funds represent about 97.5 percent of the federal and state shares of anticipated welfare expenditures for the month by localities and as a settlement of claims for August. The federal share amounts to $62.57 million.

In addition, State Comptroller Arthur Levitt announced distribution of $73.53 million to the City of New York for anticipated welfare expenditures for the period Nov. 1-15. New York City was previously advanced about $80 million in state funds for November.

The total announced for Ulster County is up sharply from the $690,452 received in November, 1974.

Church Guards Hired

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — It goes against the grain of parishioners, but the pastor of University Baptist Church has hired uniformed security guards and asked for extra police patrols to keep young drifters and bums off church property.

If they want to worship, they are welcome, the Rev. Gerald Mann says. But more often they enter church property to panhandle, copulate in the parking lot or relieve themselves on the church steps.

University Baptist was the first all-white Baptist church to integrate in Texas and the first Southern Baptist Church to ordain women deacons. People who attend, many from the University of Texas academic community, think of themselves as socially aware and compassionate, the Rev. Mann said.

But this week the Rev. Mann, 37, and his parishioners reluctantly agreed to hire the private guards and ask for the added patrols to keep the ragged young people from loitering in and around the church.

"Our church has always been free and open. This puts a black hat on us," he said.

Located near a strip of small businesses known as the "drag" serving the huge University of Texas campus, the church once prided itself on helping aimless young people, until it backfired.

"Last year we had a free soup kitchen and rap sessions with them but they were so rootless we could do little to help them. The program tripled our break-ins. They stole typewriters and food," the Rev. Mann said.

"I came to the conclusion you can't help these people by making them dependent."

"One Sunday last year we fed them in the afternoon and when they came again in the middle of the Sunday night services, they said, 'hey, where's the food?'"

"I hired the security guard because there's no way we could put up no trespassing signs on our church," he said. "But it's safe to worship here now."

The minister, who has three children, said he was not referring to students and street vendors who sell their wares along the drag, but to the transients — bums who travel a circuit that includes Boston, Boulder, Colo., and Austin.

"These people are human beings and I'm not for treating them like cattle," the Rev. Mann said. "We're just saying a few hard core people have violated our right to exist. We welcome the street people to come worship with us."

Major Scores Army

KILLEEN, Tex. (UPI) — Jack Park first joined the Army as a private in World War II. He also fought in Korea and served two combat tours of duty in Vietnam. During his years as a soldier he won a Bronze Star, a Meritorious Service medal and an Army Commendation Medal.

Now Park has been forced out of the Army short of earning his full retirement pension as part of what he calls an illegal program of forced releases.

"This is the tip of the iceberg of the Army's Watergate," Park said Thursday.

Park, 49, had reached the rank of major but was passed over three times for promotion.

He said he had been advised his chances for promotion, necessary to keep him on active duty, were excellent until he explained the military's forced retirement tactics on network television.

"Most officers being released by what they claim are illegal forceouts are close to tenure to retirement, some as close as five days," Park said. "Most need less than six months. After serving the Army at reduced salaries for so many years only to lose all retirement benefits within days or weeks of acquiring retirement seems to be lacking in justice."

"These Vietnam combat veterans, some of whom are World War II and Korean combat troops, doubt this is fair."

The Army is defendant in a class action suit filed in federal court in Maryland by hundreds of officers recently forced out of service.

The basis for the forced early outs, Park said, was former Army Secretary Howard Callaway's decision to increase to 15 per cent the number of young officers receiving early promotions.

LIFE TODAY

Section B

Vern May of Woodstock . . .
Some Strikes, Also Strikeouts

WOODSTOCK With dogged tenacity, Vern May has pursued his convictions over the last four years. So unswervingly, in fact, some of the staunchest members of his own Woodstock Republican party openly opposed his reelection.

They did not, however, succeed in doing him in. But now, after two terms as town supervisor, Vern May is stepping down by his own choice. Recently retired from IBM, he'll pursue new interests in Florida for much of the year.

May leaves bearing no grudges. "I realize many of the things I pushed hard for were unpopular," he says. "And I know the chances of any program going through the first time are practically nil, and often for some very good reasons, too. The history is usually twice up and maybe the third time, you'll get a strike."

May has had both strikes and strikeouts as supervisor. Among his major accomplishments, he feels, were vastly expanded recreation facilities, including several new tennis courts already with three more and a volleyball court under-way, and the purchase of considerable acreage for future leisure needs.

Even Vern May's Failures
Were Not Total Disappointments

His administration, he notes, solved the town's sign ordinance controversy but "putting the lid" on a battle that had raged hot and heavy for six years. And established control over the town landfill, which was "completely out of control" as to who could dump there, a factor that "would have become very expensive in time." Having created a number of brand new study commissions on conservation, civic arts and other matters, May is quick to suggest the people selected to serve were picked for their capabilities, not their party affiliation. And, while he has occasionally turned a deaf ear to feminist causes, he has not allowed his maleness to deter him from appointing many women to local agencies for the first time.

Other highlights of his years in office, he feels, were the purchase of former church properties for new town offices, and the establishment of a system of filling town job vacancies.

Even his failures were not total disappointments. Although his attempt to push through a sewerage system for the art colony was defeated, he believes the effort accomplished something important. "Bringing the sewer question to the people for a vote," he says, "was a step in the right direction. We did our homework; then asked for public expression. If it didn't get to the people, it's because communication between people in government and the public is a major problem."

He feels similarly about his proposal for a sidewalk district, currently in danger of being shelved. But, once the hue and cry surrounding this year's election has subsided, May's tenacity on this subject may well surface again before he leaves office Dec. 31.

To most observers, May's brand of politics is neither exhibitionistic nor exactly traditional. He makes that clear himself when he suggests, "Overseeing all the town's departments is a housekeeping job that never stops, and that takes a lot of attention to keep everything in sync and going."

Still, May is a mortal politician, not uncomfortable with very worldly uses of power. And like every politician from Ghandi to Robert Taft, he has trimmed his beliefs and made his separate peace more than once. The point is that he doesn't do it too often. When he finds a political pill too bitter to swallow and believes he knows an available remedy, he hits his stride and hammers away.

When May completely closed down Woodstock's welfare office recently, the action offered more than a little insight into his personal ethos. He obviously believes small towns are smart enough to govern their own affairs — and he strongly favors the work ethic.

His tough stand on welfare resulted from county and state interference in home relief, a matter he views as being in the absolute domain of home rule. He sees their intervention as visionless flailing. He is equally adamant in his belief that welfare recipients should work for their money — a policy he practically pioneered locally. It is a belief lodged in his upstate farm boy roots, his coming up through the ranks in politics, and his own hard times experiences during the depression.

"I did the CCC thing," he says, "and I didn't think there was anything wrong with having to spend some time for the benefits I was getting. Anyone physically capable should put time and effort into receiving money." It is a philosophy that explains why Woodstock home relievers worked for their money on town projects while most Kingston and Ulster County welfare recipients, in May's view, "sat home watching color TV instead of doing something constructive."

Politicians, by definition, are conservative. They tend to avoid risk and antagonizing people, and they blur issues. They are concerned with images rather than ideas, personalities rather than programs, reelection rather than morality. But May, as a lame-duck supervisor on the verge of retiring from the fray, can afford to be candid.

Of our current economic problems, he says, "We have to get used to fewer services; we must not demand so many. And the middle class must have some taxation relief." Of the new breed of office holders who shun old style politics, he suggests, "A lot of them would be better off if they had a good, basic background; could realize there's always a level of compromise that must be reached in order to accomplish something." As for governmental power: "It has to come back to the local levels — because we can manage better and do a better job of being fair and honest in our management."

As Vern May prepares to leave office, any number of his Woodstock constituents compare him to what baseball fans like to call a "clutch hitter." Others insist the drama of his time in office has come from his lack of melodrama. And almost none say that he allowed himself to be pushed into complete ineffectiveness or utter surrender.

Having had both strikes and strikeouts — by his own admission — he has little cause to fault himself on the conduct of the ball game in the late stages of the ninth inning.

A relaxed Vern May, complete with slippers, takes time out at his home on the Zena Road to read his favorite daily newspaper.

It's wash up time for Vern May prior to sitting down for dinner, served by his wife in their Woodstock area home. May, after two terms as Woodstock supervisor, will leave office on Dec. 31.

Woman Now Runs Campus Where She Was Denied Professorship

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Lorene Rogers once turned down a college teaching job offered at only half pay because she was a woman. Thirteen years ago she was denied a professorship, again because of her sex.

She is now the first female president of a major American university. But her appointment has provoked bitter protests from both the University of Texas faculty and student body with some of the most vociferous coming from women's rights exponents.

But the 61-year-old biochemist insists she holds no grudges over past discrimination or the protests about her appointment as UT president.

If she were going to be bitter about anything, she says it would be the laboratory explosion that killed her husband in 1941 and kept her from being a housewife all her life.

"I've never been one who pushed ahead and scratched on the walls trying to climb my way up. I had no plans or ambitions to become a career-woman. If my husband had lived I probably would have been a housewife," she said.

"She has done absolutely nothing for women on this campus."

Mrs. Rogers now runs the same campus where she was denied a professorship in 1962 because of her sex. UT Regents voted 5-3 to name Mrs. Rogers as the university's 15th president despite protests by some of the 43,000 students and a demand by some professors she resign.

Lady Bird Johnson, UT's only female regent, voted against her.

Most criticism centered on alleged Regents' disregard for faculty-student opinion. But some of the bitterest complaints came from women's rights proponents who view Mrs. Rogers as an apologist for sexism.

Newspaper articles quoting Mrs. Rogers saying, "A woman would give up her job any day to marry," haven't won her any feminist friends.

"She has done absolutely nothing for women on this campus," said Bobby Nelson, attorney for a woman suing UT for alleged sex discrimination.

The sex discrimination charge, filed in 1971, prompted Mrs. Rogers' appointment as vice president and designation as head of a panel to investigate bias charges.

Critics charged the investigation was a whitewash and the antidiscrimination plan weak.

"These are women who are concerned about a particular case where there is a difference of opinion because of the merits of the case," Mrs. Rogers says. "I do not believe in promoting a woman just because she is a woman."

"There are women all over this campus who have been promoted, had their salaries elevated considerably over the past four or five years because 'm here,' she says. "Because have gone about this in a searable fashion I have gotten to the point where I have had real influence."

Mrs. Rogers has drawn even more criticism over her move to block pay raises for 74 faculty members recommended for salary increases by their deans. A number of her most vocal critics were among those out, but Mrs. Rogers dismisses her charges she set out to punish her critics as "ridiculous."

"During the late 60's there were many people who got large raises while many got none. Since the 1970's we've had only straight percentage increases. I was just trying to straighten out some of these things, trying to write as fair a budget as I know how. There was no blacklist."

Mrs. Rogers says she remembers the salary discrimination he faced as a woman too well to engage in such arbitrary acts.

As a graduate student she cored top in her class and was offered a part-time job as a teaching assistant at half the 120-a-month specified for the post.

"When I asked the professor why he was only going to pay me half what the position normally paid, he said, 'Because you're a girl. I might have to help you,'" she recalled.

"I told him I would not teach that course for half what he paid a man. He taught the course himself rather than pay me the money that was available. He couldn't see paying a girl as much as he paid a man."

Mrs. Rogers left UT to teach at Sam Houston State College in 1947 but returned to the Austin campus two years later as a researcher and eventually assistant director of the Clayton Foundation Biomedical Institute.

"A great deal of the research I was doing was being published under the name of the director. I was making a living and was very in what I was doing. This was so far back in the women's movement that I didn't really expect much more."

When she decided in 1962 that she wanted a teaching post, the chemistry department refused to consider making her a professor even though she had taught courses in the department.

"They had been very much pleased with what I did. And I got the student association teaching excellence award. But those days they didn't accept women in that department."

Mrs. Rogers became a nutrition professor in the home economics department instead. Some things women protest today never bothered her. "There was for women an accepting attitude during that time (early in her career) that is no longer true," she says.

Cindy Marcus, in the role of Rosemary, consoles Gene Heitzman (J. Pierpont Finch), in Coach House Players' opener for the 1975-76 season, "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying."

Coach House Opening Play Has Curtain Call Thursday

KINGSTON
The beehive is certainly buzzing at "Coach House" as the local theater group readies for its Fall musical production of "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," which will be presented at the J. Watson Bailey school the evenings of Nov. 13-14-15 at 8:30.

This Coach House production is being directed by Paul Cooper. Cooper resides in Lyonsville with his wife, Carol, and their two children. Some of his future projects are directing an American modern play for PAW, and also directing Puccini's "La Boheme" for the Mid-Hudson Opera — so you can see that Cooper is a versatile individual as far as his theatrical assignments are concerned.

Some behind-the-scenes people who have proven vital to the success of this show are: Linda Houghtaling, assistant to the director; Sharon McDermott, choreographer; Samuel Flores, set design; Ray Caddy and Al Curl, set construction; Frank Gardner, lighting; Linda Houghtaling, also handling make-up; Linda Caddy and June Boyle, props; Betty Madonna and Pat Bottino, publicity and Eloise Gardner, play program. It should be pointed out that all Coach House members — in some way, shape, or form, give an assist to assure that an evening in the theater will be a pleasant one.

Tickets will be on sale at the Bailey school Monday through Wednesday of this week from 7 to 8:30 p.m. and tickets will also be available on the evenings of the show. Theatergoers are reminded to ask about Coach House Associate membership tickets, which enable one to see all three Coach House productions this season at reduced rates.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Prof. claims big slam laydown

By Oswald & James Jacoby

The Professor looked over the dummy for a few moments, spread his hand and remarked, "I'm glad I cheated a point and opened a 20-point two notrump. If either diamonds or clubs break three-two I have thirteen top tricks. If neither suit breaks, I can make my grand slam on a squeeze which I can develop against any and all distributions."

The Professor won the club in his own hand, led a second club to dummy, noted that clubs had not broken and proceeded to cash dummy's king of diamonds and his own queen, to note that East held a diamond stopper.

He cashed dummy's last club honor and his own last diamond honor and his three high hearts, while discarding the last club and last diamond from dummy.

Everyone was down to four cards. West had to keep the high club, East the high diamond. Neither one could guard spades, so all the spades were good.

You readers can get considerable fun out of seeing how the hand makes if West stops both minor suits, and if East holds the club stopper instead of West.

Kingston AARP Speaker

Mrs. Antoinette Tennant, director of the Ulster County Office of the Aging, will be the guest speaker at the November meeting of the Kingston Chapter 2039 of the American Association of Retired Persons. The meeting will be held in the cafeteria of the George Washington School Thursday, Nov. 20, at 7:30 p.m.

Mrs. Tennant is well known in the local area. She has been a summer resident of the area since 1932 and has been a permanent resident since 1968. Since then she has been active in many community affairs. In 1971, she aided in reorganizing the Ulster County Senior Citizens Alliance and was its president until she resigned to become director of the Office of the Aging. She also was president of the Senior Citizens of the Town of Olive, is a member of the League of Women Voters and the American Association of Retired Persons. She served on the Advisory Board of the YWCA and the Lay Committee of the Onondaga Schools. She is one of the few unsalaried directors of the Office of the Aging in the country. She volunteered her services to the Office in order that the complete funds might be used to assist the Senior Citizens of the County.

Her topic for this meeting will be "Priority Needs for Senior Citizens in Ulster County as Indicated by Senior Groups and the Advisory Council of the Office of the Aging." All members of the local AARP chapter are invited to attend as well as any other interested persons.

Hit 'Gypsy' Next at Paltz

NEW PALTZ Barbara Hardgrave, who will be featured as Madame Rose in the upcoming New Paltz production of Gypsy is equally versed in the fields of classical and popular music.

While a freshman in college, she quickly went from a chorus member in Oklahoma to the lead role in the folk classic The Dark of the Moon. After transferring to Winthrop College in South Carolina, she concentrated on her voice lessons and did not resume her dramatic training until her senior year when she appeared in Goldoni's The Servant of Two Masters, as well as concert readings of The War of the Worlds and Othello.

Eight performances on McKenna Theatre Boards.

Her initiation into professional musical theater came while she was studying at the New England Conservatory in Boston. During her stay, the school presented for the first and only time in its history a non-opera, Sandy Wilson's The Boy Friend. However, her most valuable experience in popular music came while working as a singing waitress in Cape Cod's Compass Lounge. For three summers, she performed every night with a group known as "The Funtasties." During this time, she expanded her repertoire to include such Broadway classics as Rodgers and Hammerstein's "I Can't Say No" and Lerner and Loewe's "The Lusty Month of May." Fore-shadowing her present role in Gypsy, she and the company baritone opened each evening's performance by singing the blockbuster "May We Entertain You?"

Upon coming to New Paltz in 1967, she put aside her theatrical activities and settled down as a voice teacher in the Music Department: a job she loves not only for the teaching aspects, but because it allows her to give as many concerts as she likes. Her favorite area of song is lieder, or German art songs — most frequently associated with Franz Schubert — and she beams when talking about Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau, the leading interpreter of the form.

For the past two summers though, she returned to musical theatre in the Parker Summer Repertory Theatre's revues A Party and Here to Stay. Based respectively on the works of Sir Noel Coward, and George and Ira Gershwin, she sang standards like "Someday I'll Find You" and "Summertime" in the two memorable productions. It was her performance in A Party that prompted director Dan Swartz to approach her last Spring with the idea of playing the lead role of Madame Rose in Gypsy, a challenge she readily accepted. Based on her past record and on reports filtering out from rehearsals, it's a safe bet that the show will be another triumph for Barbara Hardgrave.

Gypsy will be presented in McKenna Theatre for eight performances: November 14, 15, 19, 20, 21, and 22 at 8:30 p.m.; and November 16 and 23 at 2:00 p.m.

Martinelli . . . Memory to Wife

LEWISBURG, PA.

A five-foot bronze sculpture by Saugerties, N.Y. artist Ezio Martinelli, has been presented to Bucknell University by the artist as a memorial to his wife, the former Marian Reid Wilson of Milton, Pa.

Mrs. Martinelli was a member of Bucknell's Class of 1944 and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Walter Wilson, both deceased, who were widely known residents of the Pennsylvania city. Mrs. Martinelli died last June.

Martinelli still maintains his home at 11 Lane Street in Saugerties where he has his studio.

The memorial gift to Bucknell University is an abstract figure which Martinelli calls "Purdah." It is a bronze piece, measuring 72 inches by 20 inches by 20 inches.

The Saugerties artist notes that "Purdah" was created in 1964 during the time he taught at the American art colony in Rome and a period he describes as "one of his wife's happiest years."

Martinelli, a painter, designer, sculptor and teacher, has worked in direct metal for some 20 years. One of his best known works is a 30 by 17-foot aluminum abstract sculpture titled "Sunburst," which hangs on the east wall of the General Assembly Building at the United Nations in New York City. Among his other sculpture commissions have been in 1964 Electricity's Thrust, Joint Industries Board, New York and in 1966 Astra, Revere Aluminum Co.

Art work by Martinelli has been included in principal exhibitions here and abroad since 1934 and he has had one-man shows in galleries in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and Seattle. He is represented in collections in the Whitney and Guggenheim Museums in New York, the Philadelphia Museum of Art, the Chicago Art Institute, Brooks Memorial Museum in Memphis, Tenn., the University of Wisconsin Museum, and the Newark and the Brooklyn Museums.

Martinelli taught at various times at the Philadelphia College of Art and the Philadelphia Museum of Art, and at Parsons School of Design. He retired last year as professor of sculpture at Sarah Lawrence College.

Placement of the large bronze sculpture at Bucknell will be determined in the near future by the university's committee on art.

Actor, Twiggy Will Wed Once Present Wife Shed

By Robin Adams Sloan

Q: Who is this fellow who is going to marry "Twiggy"?
—R.R., Ogden, Utah

A: He is Michael Whitney, a 38-year-old American actor who met "Twiggy" (Leslie Hornby) when they worked together in the film "W." He has been struggling with his career in Hollywood for about ten years without gaining much notice, but is now doing well in England where he is starring in a hit TV series called "Oil Strike North." They'll get married, they insist, as soon as he is free of his present wife in California.

Q: I heard that writer Irving Wallace doesn't trust banks, and keeps all his money in a vault in his home. Can this be true?—E.T., Webster, La.

A: Yes and no. Wallace has a walk-in vault in his home but he doesn't keep any money there. Wallace, who with his son David Wallechinsky wrote the fascinating new "The People's Almanac," keeps all of his manuscripts and research notes filed in the vault, which is fireproof.

Gossip Beat

Q: Who is Julie Christie's main man now that Warren Beatty has moved on?—R.K., Clovis, N. Mex.

A: She has lately been seen on the arm of Ryan O'Neal, who seems to be coming up fast to challenge Warren as film's most aggressive womanizer. Among others who have been dazzled by the O'Neal charm are Anouk Aimee, Bianca Jagger, Marisa Berenson and Ursula Andress.

QUESTION YOU NEVER ASKED: Which major film is just winding up, two months behind schedule and several million over budget? "All the President's Men," which just couldn't get it all together like it was supposed to happen.

Q: Why does Lilli Palmer write such terrible things about her ex-husband, Rex Harrison? She once loved him enough to marry him, didn't she?—C.W., Nashville, Tenn.

A: Apparently you either like Rex a lot or not at all. His currently estranged wife Elizabeth had barely left the marital bed before she announced a book about her experiences. And from her comments it will not be flattering to Rex. On the other hand, Rachel Roberts, who was Mrs. Harrison before Elizabeth, is reported to have spent hours on the trans-Atlantic telephone recently, trying for a reconciliation with 67-year-old Rex. No go, however.

Q: I heard that pornographic movies in Europe have been taken a step further. Is that true?—E.B., Des Moines, Iowa

A: It's not only true in Europe, but if a customs hassle is settled, it'll be true right here in the United States. A Belgian film titled "The Pig and I: A Love Story," about a man who has an "affair" with a pig, is the film being imported for American distribution by producer Robin von Joachim.

Recital

Miss Elizabeth Krouse, organist at the Reformed Church of the Comforter, Kingston will give an organ recital at the church, Wynkoop Place, 3:30 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 23. The program will include compositions from the baroque to contemporary eras. Miss Krouse began her piano and organ studies at a very early age and held her first church organist post at St. John's Lutheran Church, Middletown at the age of 16. She has continued to serve as organist/choir director in the area since that time. A member of the New York State Music Teachers Association, she has given recitals in Middletown and Kingston. PAGEA Little Assistance by Man
Apple Trees Hand-in-Hand With Wildlife

KINGSTON

Apples and apple trees have long been a favorite food of both wildlife and man. Birds, squirrels, rabbits and deer share our enjoyment of this highly nutritious food. Even after the pulp has fallen away, many animals eat the abundant seeds.

Apple trees abound in the Catskills and even outnumber the cultivated tree population on our commercial fruit farms along the fertile Hudson Valley. Abandoned orchards in the mountainous regions continue to produce sporadic crops and the wild or natural apple trees stand out with the Spring bloom and places to observe deer racing to get those choice drops this time of the year. History credits Johnny Appleseed with Agricultural Report:

By William H. Palmer

distributing apple seeds far and wide but in the Catskills it was the lowly cow that seeded our pastures with viable seeds from apples picked up in neglected orchards, turned to pasture usage. Once farms ceased to support agriculture, these apple seedlings competed with other native hardwoods for existence. A little assistance by man can help these trees to produce delicious, healthful food for many forms of wildlife.

The most common reason for lack of fruit is over topping by other trees. Apple trees need sunlight and energy to form fruit buds and produce fruit.

If nearby trees, that are shading the apple trees, are removed or thinned enough to "release" the apple trees, they will respond.

Pruning the apple trees in the Spring will stimulate fruit production. Remove all dead branches and 35 per cent of the living branches to insure good fruit bud formation in June. Prune branches as close to the trunk as possible to allow new bark to grow over the wound.

Adding fertilizer next Spring may help to stimulate fruit formation also. There is competition for water and plant nutrients below the soil surface. Cutting back all competing plant growth around the tree in an area double the diameter of the tree top, will give the apple tree roots a better chance to use limited nutrients available. Adding a pound of nitrogen fertilizer will speed up the process.

The more advanced pomologist may want to graft a known type of apple variety on wild trees for longer holding quality. This makes fruit available for a greater part of the year for species that cannot locate it under the snow. Many crab apples are especially well suited for this purpose. The "Bobwhite" variety is especially well-known for this quality.

The area can be made even more attractive for wildlife by providing some shelter. Use the brush and fallen trees to form a large pile away from the base of the apple tree. Rabbits will soon find this to their liking. Deer will feed on fresh buds cut off apple trees this winter and spring.

The Dayton
For Growing Pains

By Chuck Gaudet

PROVIDENCE, R.I. Today's house feature comes to the aid of the family with growing pains. The "Dayton" has four bedrooms, all isolated from the main living area. A single bath with both tub and shower has been placed in a position easily accessible from any of the rooms. In the event the fourth bedroom is not needed at the moment it will find good use as an all purpose room, such as den or reading room.

The room of distinction in the "Dayton" however, is the living room. It has many highlights, but the commanding feature is the size, 13 by 20 feet, 6 inches. The large picture window, fireplace and open planning to the dining room, puts the finishing touches to this excellent four bedroom layout.

With the exception of the brick planter in front of the living room picture window, the entire outside finish consists of regular wood shingles, (red cedar if painted) white cedar (if left natural), and the roof has been sloped slightly more than the average ranch house to enhance the exterior appearance.

Lawnmower
Storage Safety

When storing your lawn mower, it's important you do it safely. Here are some tips from experts at the Outdoor Power Equipment Institute for the owners of the 40 million lawn mowers in America that will be bedded down for the cold weather.

- Drain all gasoline out of the mower before putting it away. Store the gas in a strong, metal, clearly marked, safety-type can with a self-closing cap and keep it away from children and combustible materials.

- Never reach into the blade to clean it unless you're sure the mower is off and the power is off. Stop the engine and disconnect or remove the spark plug before making any repairs.

- Make sure that you store the mower in a safe place where children and pets can't "play" with it.

- Discuss proper servicing and maintenance needs with your dealer. Schedule a service appointment well before the spring rush.

- Before you take the machine out again for spring mowing, make sure to read the safe operating instructions included with the mower. Make sure you relearn the controls well enough to be able to act instantly and correctly.

Follow these rules and your lawn mower should be in great shape after its winter hibernation.

Insulate Now

Insulation pays for itself, especially in the attic. Warm air rises, so don't let it escape through the roof! A six-inch thick blanket of thermal insulation pays for itself year 'round in cash savings and comfort. A sensible idea from the New York State Emergency Fuel Office.

The living area of the "Dayton" plan contains 1,464 square feet of space, and has an overall length, including the garage, of 64 feet.

Complete building plans and material list for the "Dayton", showing sections for construction with a full basement, without a basement or on concrete slab—with wood, brick, stone or concrete block, are available to readers at the moderate cost of $28 for the first set and $12 for each additional set, by writing to the Associated Blueprint Co., 595 Plainfield Street, Providence, R.I.—02909.

Plan books of various designs are also available for 50 cents each, and a new booklet of past newspaper features for $1.50.

Pick Own Size

Decorating can provide problems.

This is especially so for the do-it-yourselfer. "Pick on your own size" is a good rule to follow in order to avoid sore thumbs and unfinished projects.

Those facing major wall paneling projects with minimum help from friends, spouses and other family members can save time with Marlite planks.

These "mini-panels" come in a wide range of textures, designs and colors. But, best of all, they narrow installation problems down to workable proportions. A mere 16 inches wide, they also are tongued-and-grooved for ease of handling and installation.

Don't Waste Energy

What's wrong with this picture? If you're energy-wise you know that the harried homemaker is making three big energy-wasting mistakes at once. To avoid unnecessary energy consumption (and cut your utility bills), try the following tips from the Metal Cookware Manufacturers Association. Match pan size to the size of the range-top heating unit on an electric range; on a gas range, don't let flames extend up the sides of the pot. Don't peek into the oven while food is cooking; opening it can cause up to 20 percent of its heat to escape. And never let the refrigerator door remain open; teach family members to open it as little as possible.

Some Advice on Finishing

Imperfections Give Character to Old Trunk

By Jean Barnes

Last of Two Columns

"You're better off if you don't strive for perfection," Carol Gawthrop said as she explained the processes involved in refinishing an old trunk.

She and Fran Thompson have worked together for several years refinishing and restoring trunks in their Kansas community.

In a previous column, they discussed repairing and cleaning of an old trunk. Now, they offer advice on finishing.

They recommend you start with the slats first. "We've always felt that wooden slats should be finished naturally but that's just our preference," Carol explained. If the trunk has wooden handles you will want to do these in the same finish. Metal slats or binding should be covered with a rust resistant paint. And, the two women prefer a finish with a dull sheen instead of a high gloss.

Metal trim and ornaments must be handled separately. Some of these may be brass but the chances for all of it to be brass are small, they said. Since you want the trunk to appear uniform they recommend painting such things as cornerbraces, rosettes, strap guides, the lock and handle hardware in the same color of metallic paint.

The body of the trunk whether canvas or tin, can be antiqued in your color preference. Start with the bottom of the trunk first and when dry do the sides and the top. This same color should

You can either cover cardboard cut to fit each side and then slip it in place or you can work directly with the fabric on the bare surface. Use white glue. Make sure all raw edges are creased and turned under and glued tightly.

If the stay or stop is issuing from the lid you can make one by attaching a small chain on the edges of the lid and the base.

They both recommend the use of either cotton or foam padding under the lining of the lid and giving it the look of tufting with upholstery tacks. If the trunk has a curved top "you will just have to work with the fabric to get it to fit and it will eventually smooth out," they said.

The tray or till of the trunk should never be covered, they cautioned. It could make the till fit too tightly against the sides. Painting of the till is best.

And as you work, remember their advice, don't strive for perfection. A trunk should show its age and wear. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

be used to paint the inside, down about an inch below the lip of the lid.

Before starting on the lining, replace the handles. If they are badly worn, you probably can find replacements at a leather goods shop or use a heavy leather belt to fashion new ones.

When the paint is dry, you are ready to start on the lining. "Our favorite is a corduroy which looks like velvet and is easy to work with." However, they continued, any cotton material is usable. It doesn't have to be heavy or fadeproof.

Astrographs for Today, Monday

Sunday Nov. 9, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't try to dominate center stage in your peer group today. If you do, the notices you get from your friends won't be "raves."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Unfortunately, you won't be sufficiently relaxed today to enjoy some light-hearted pursuits. You need to take time to smell the roses.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Keep your counsel today unless it is specifically requested. Otherwise, you could be embarrassed when told to mind your own business.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You may feel that the assets of a close associate are partly yours. Avoid this erroneous impression. He may feel otherwise, and so advise you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You and your mate may not see eye-to-eye on things early in the day. It would be extremely unwise to let little disagreements mar your whole weekend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You could be a little grumpy about any work you have to do today. There's no problem unless you're working with tools.

Be careful.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Being too generous could be your fault today. Money flows easily through your fingers. You'll mourn for your ruined budget!

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) There are enough problems at home without adding those of an outsider to the pile. Avoid creating new dilemmas for the family.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today, you tend to overlook the doughnut and see only the hole. You indulge in an unusual spell of pessimism.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Everyone you meet seems to have his hand out today. You're not obligated to give unless you sincerely feel you should.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You won't have faith in plans unless they are of your making. This is fine, but being too outspoken about it may alienate others.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It may be a little hard for you to crawl out of your shell today. Force yourself to get moving. Later, you'll be glad you did.

Cluster Headaches Like Migraine

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB—Would appreciate your comments on a very painful condition I have, cluster headache. I am taking medications, which so far haven't helped much. Are there any kinds of temporary relief that you have heard of that I might try?

DEAR READER—Cluster headaches are classified as a type of migraine headache. They are called "cluster" because they occur in a cluster of attacks, one after the other, then there may be a relatively long period of no headaches.

The headache usually begins with throbbing pain, high in one side of the nose and spreads to involve the eye on the same side and sometimes the forehead. Most victims are males.

They are treated just like a migraine headache. Ergotamine tartrate is the old standby that often helps. Sometimes Inderal (propranolol) is used or Sansert (methysergide). The latter has to be carefully supervised and is usually discontinued after five or at most six months. At least for a time. That is long enough to outlast most recurrent attacks of a cluster series.

There isn't much you can do for yourself. I'm sorry to say, except rid yourself of as many tensions as possible. But during a series of such headaches it is important to avoid all alcohol. Alcohol seems to cause these headaches during such a period. Once the series has stopped, alcohol no longer has any influence.

For more information about the various types of headaches and what to do about them, write to me in care of the Freeman, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019, send 50 cents, a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope, and ask for The Health Letter number 2-9 Headache: Man's Most Common Pain.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I know you have written about hysterectomy operations in your column many times, but I have never come across one I just heard. I am 54 and soon will have a total hysterectomy performed. A new neighbor of mine frightened me. She told me she had the same operation seven years ago and has been experiencing loss of hair for a year. When she shaves her underarms or legs there is practically no growth and if any it takes months. She is also experiencing loss of hair in other parts of her body. I can see the effect this has on her. Does this usually occur after such an operation? Can anything be done or taken to prevent this or to have regrowth? I need peace of mind before having the operation.

DEAR READER—I understand your concern, and your neighbor has done you a disservice, even though it is unintentional. No, no, no, a plain hysterectomy will not cause you to lose your hair.

A total hysterectomy includes removal of the body and cervical portion of the uterus. This alone doesn't even affect the function of the ovaries. If you have the ovaries taken out, too, that is more than a complete hysterectomy. In that case, particularly in a young woman, hormone replacement can be given which will do everything for you that the ovarian hormones were doing.

The Consumer Question Box

By Margaret Dana

Q. I would like to know if there is a good way of preserving apples for a period of several months.

A. I presume you mean preserving fresh, uncooked or dried apples. The best advice from experts on fruits and their storage is that apples to be stored should be of the type intended for winter usage, not for summer or early fall usage. They should also be in good condition and without open defects or wormholes. Store them in barrels or boxes in a cool, dark area where they will not get heat from sun or furnace or other heat sources. They should then keep well for several months.

Q. How much truth is there in the reports we hear that aerosol sprays are not only dangerous to health when used indoors, but may also be destroying the ozone layer in the air, with ultimate destruction of life on earth?

A. There is no definitive evidence as yet of the effect on our atmosphere. Some scientists see it that way; others of equal standing do not. The research is continuing, and we can only wait. We shall all have to adopt a motto of "Don't believe everything you hear — let's insist on real evidence, not guesswork."

Q. Recently you said that it was not advised by food experts to freeze fresh tomatoes. Please tell us why? I have frozen them for years, and though they are somewhat mushy, they have an excellent flavor for cooking.

A. The advice was given by food preservation experts at the USDA on the basis of the very point you make — the raw tomatoes when frozen become mushy and lose all shape and texture. There is no danger so far as I know. But since you say you use the frozen tomatoes in cooking later, it might be best to cook them first. They will serve the same purpose and take up less room in the freezer. If any germs happen to be on the raw tomato, they will be knocked out by the boiling before freezing.

Youth in the News — Honors

Honors are being accorded area collegians for past and present achievements.

Two area residents were among the 194 students cited for scholastic excellence at the College of New Rochelle's Honors Convocation earlier this month.

They are Sandra Rightmyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rightmyer of Eapous Drive Saugerties and Ingrid Vogt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Vogt of High Street, Phoenicia.

Sandra, a senior majoring in religious studies was on the dean's scholars list. Ingrid, a senior majoring in American studies, was on the honor students list for the second year.

Sandra Malek of Shokan has been named to Oracle, Ithaca College senior honor society. Selection is based on outstanding academic achievement and involvement in extracurricular activities.

A physical therapy major, she has been named repeatedly to the dean's list for scholarship.

As a senior this year, she is doing her clinical practice in New York City.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Malek of 6 Dogwood Drive, Shokan, Sandra is a 1972 graduate of Ontario Central High School.

A Kingston resident, now a student at Hobart and William Smith Colleges, Geneva, has been cited for her academic excellence.

Kathleen Burton, daughter of Wayne Burton of Kingston, was awarded the Elizabeth Hutchinson Memorial Prize of $500 for her "unique contribution to the community through her character and personality."

Kathleen is a junior at the liberal arts college.

Victoria M. Johnson of Yarmouth, Me., has been selected as a Julius Seeley Bixler Scholar at Colby College, Waterville, Me.

A graduate of Kingston High School, she is a junior majoring in French and is studying under the Sweet Briar College Program in Paris this year.

Bixler Scholars are top ranking students named for recognition of their academic achievements and contributions at Colby.

Victoria is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Johnson of 12 Sandy Brook Lane, Yarmouth, Me.

In other campus news of note, Marion Miel of Hurley was a chairman of the fashion show, Main Street U.S.A., presented recently at Russell Sage College, Troy.

The production was arranged by senior retail management majors at the college with a Bicentennial '76 theme for men's and women's fashions from Capital district shops.

Geraldine M. Buckley of Box 188A, West Hurley is one of 20 seniors at the College of Mount St. Vincent, Riverdale to be selected for inclusion in this year's edition of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges.

Dana J. Holmquist, 9 Birchwood Drive, West Saugerties, is a senior student at Shepherd College, Shepherdstown, W.Va., who is currently completing the work for the bachelor's degree and teacher certification by serving in a directed teaching assignment at Clear Spring, Md.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Holmquist, he is a Saugerties High School graduate. At Shepherd College he has been a member of the varsity swim team and of Phi Sigma Epsilon Fraternity.

He is teaching physical education at Clear Spring Middle School.

Seventy-one Shepherd College seniors are currently in directed teaching assignments in public schools, completing the requirements for teacher certification. The students take classroom supervision responsibility while under the directing guidance of the regular public school teacher, for a period of nine weeks.

What Has Happened to Students' College Aptitude Scores

By UPI

Some 1.9 million high school students, anticipating college, each year take tests to measure achievement and-or scholastic aptitude.

During the past 10 years the scores have been declining on tests administered by Educational Testing Service in Princeton, N.J., and by American College Testing in Iowa City, Iowa.

The educational community is puzzled and concerned. Both the College Entrance Examination Board and American College Testing are trying to determine reasons for the dipping scores.

The College Board contracts with Educational Testing for the giving of its tests — Scholastic Aptitude Tests given in two areas, verbal and mathematical. These are called SATS.

The SATS are scored from 200 to 800. Scores near the top help students to be considered for admission to the most academically rigorous colleges and universities.

The American College Testing scores are figured a different way and the score range is one to 36. The 36 on a College Testing examination would be, roughly, equivalent to an 800 on the SATS.

The SAT score averages in 1962-63 were 479 for verbal and 502 for mathematical. In 1974-75 the comparable scores were 434 and 472.

The American College Testing Service reports the 1974-75 mean score was 18.6, continuing a 10-year decline. In 1972-73, for example, the mean was 19.2. Over the last 10 years, according to Leo A. Munday, vice president of College Testing's Research and Development Division, the average score has declined "about one-fifth or a standard deviation."

That is statistical talk. Translated, it shows the College Testing scores are in a slide similar to the SAT dip. Both nonprofit groups started examining the reasons for the decline several years ago.

Recently the College Board's president, Dr. Sidney P. Marland Jr., former U.S. Commissioner of Education, appointed a panel to take a longer look at the situation. This is headed by Willard Wertz, former Secretary of Labor and president of the National Manpower Institute in Washington. Test measurement experts, sociologists and educational scholars will have been appointed to the panel.

What does it mean if the scores are falling — and why are they falling? These are the two questions both ACT and the College Board panel seek to answer.

Does it mean the high schools aren't doing the job done 10 or more years ago? Could television-viewing mean the students find it more and more difficult to relate to the printed word?

Marland comments:

"The SAT was not designed as a measure of school performance and should not be used that way. To single out the schools as being responsible for the decline is unwarranted, unfair and scientifically unfounded."

Among theories circulating in academic circles, the test scores have been going down for a combination of reasons.

Factors relating to broader social conditions were cited by Marland when he announced the probe panel. They included:

—Lack of discipline and rigor in the classroom.

—Increased parental permissiveness at home.

—The phenomenal increase in television viewing over the past decade. Some observers are persuaded that students are more tuned into the oral approach than they are to the printed word. Would they, then, perform better on a test presented on something like a television screen? Reporting in "ACTIVITY," newsletter of American College Testing, Munday made this point about the falling scores:

"The most plausible explanation to many people is that the pool of college-bound youth has changed. More students from the lower half of their high school class, we conclude, are likely to attend college now than in the past. Many have not had traditional college preparatory course work in high school and do not have the academic goals that have characterized college-bound students of previous years. Such a factor influences scores on the ACT."

The declines, by the way, are being noted in all geographical regions. And one thing both testing services agree on: the tests have not gotten harder during this decline.

Making of the Gift

By Lei

Remember two Christmases (or Chanukahs) ago, when you said that you were tired of the holiday hassles and expense and you were going to make your gifts the next year? And the next year was last year, and you didn't have the time to do it, but you said you'd start earlier this year.

Well, it is now earlier this year, so what are you making for holiday gifts? The mistake of waiting too long to get started? Will December 20 find you waiting in a line of 47 people at the discount store with a basket full of overpriced stuff that wasn't really what you wanted to give as gifts?

Remember, the month of December is so full of other preparations, parties, and delays, that you really ought to have all your gifts made by the end of this month! If you've decided to give hand-knit berets and scarves, you're already behind schedule! Fortunately, there are many beautiful, original gifts you can make without too much time — or expense. Having a talent helps.

Everybody is good at doing something — have you got a creative talent you can put to use? What is there around the house that you can recycle into a beautiful new life? What do the people on your gift list want or need?

Joan was into photography. She sorted through the candid photos she had taken of her friends, enlarged the best ones, and put them in handmade desk frames. She also included in each package 25 wallet-sized photos, and a copy of the negative. People being egotists that they are, they freaked out — particularly a few who didn't know they had been photoed!

Randy could paint. He wasn't too sure anyone would want a painting for their wall, but he gave several ladies on his gift list hand-painted stand-up mirrors. The recipients were so delighted, that this year he's doing some wall paintings for family friends — color-keyed to their living or bedrooms, with subject matter dealing with their interests — birds for the birdwatcher, and boats for the sailing enthusiast.

Jennifer can sew, and she got a sewing machine for Christmas last year. This year she is sending out pot-holders with a holiday theme instead of greeting cards — and since she made them out of scraps, they cost nothing. For the little kids she knew she made stuffed dolls and animals, for the bigger kids, clothes for their GI Joe and Barbie dolls. She cut up some discarded material, and made cowboy and cowgirl, Indian and squaw playclothes for her young brothers and sisters. Now she's starting some tote bags, vests, and hats for the adults on her list — and a beautiful western-style shirt for a certain special boy.

Joe would have loved to have made gifts for his family and friends, but his talent was playing football, and he didn't think anybody wanted a touchdown for Christmas. Then, one day, he found a craft shop with easy, readily assembled kits. He gave wallets and beaded belts last year, but this year, he has the experience he needs to make his own gifts without the kits.

Almost every town has at least one store that sells arts-and-crafts supplies. There you can buy kits with full supplies and instructions for making macramé plant hangers, decoupage jewelry chests, imitation stained-glass ornaments, hand-decorated tee-shirts, jewel-studded blue jeans, or home-made candles. Of course, these kits cost more than the supplies in them would cost separately, but they are good for the beginner who needs extra instruction, and many contain re-usable parts, such as looms, molds, or tools, which you can use later with your own supplies. Such stores may also sell jewelry settings, glass paint, and picture frames and other items to make your gift items easier and more interesting to make.

You can really save money if you re-cycle discardables into beautiful gifts. After all, our relatives made warm winter quilts out of discarded clothing! Well-rinsed shampoo bottles can be made into dolls for young children, and a rinsed doll house can be salvaged out of cardboard cartons, contact paper, and imaginative furnishings. An interesting silver photo frame can be made using flashcubes, and egg cartons and plastic bottles are easy to turn into unbreakable tree ornaments.

And don't forget the family pet — yours, or others! It's easy to make a dog collar, a catnip mouse, or a pet pillow. If you find a discarded carpet patch, make a catnip-loaded scratching pad for your favorite cat. It will be almost as much fun for you as it will for her!

ROLLING STONE

By Dave Marsh

Paul Simon: Still Crazy After All These Years (Columbia PC 33540).

Paul Simon's new album, his first in a year-and-a-half, is the grimmest and most ambitious he has ever made. The chronicle of the dissolution of a marriage, it deserts all of the upbeat song styles which have made him his mark in favor of gloomy tunes closer to James Taylor in mood and conception. Simon has always been thought of as a superior melodist, but he might have gotten away with his desertion of basic values here, if not for Bob Dylan.

Dylan's Blood on the Tracks, was concerned with the same kind of marital break-up, but it contained Dylan's best music in years, not his worst. If Simon's argument for the flat emotional tone of the music was to be that the subject matter wouldn't allow anything brighter, Blood on the Tracks devastates that idea; it isn't jolly, but it never oppresses with despair.

To complete the turnabout, Dylan's lyrics seem distinctly inferior to those of Simon, which is again the reverse of their accepted roles. Blood on the Tracks is a furious attempt on the part of the (male) singer to divert blame from himself. But Still Crazy not only accepts responsibility ("50 Ways to Leave Your Lover," "I Do It for Your Love") but is absolutely eloquent about the reasons why there finally aren't any reasons ("You're Kind"). If this doesn't excuse the unrelieved depression here, it at least makes it more interesting. Still Crazy After All These Years may be one of the year's biggest artistic failures, but it is also most fascinating.

Frankie Miller: The Rock (Chrysalis (CHR 1088)).

Miller is a young Scottish singer, typically rooted in R&B, but his second U.S. album ranks as one of the best performances by a young singer I've heard in 1975. He is infatuated with styles already established by other singers, but they are great styles (Otis Redding's for "All My Love to You" and several others and Bob Dylan's for "Hard on the Levee" and a couple more) and he executes exceptionally well. The only question remaining is whether he can blend them into a form that's distinctly his own; on the evidence of this, he'll get to it in time.

Tom Waits: Nighthawks at the Diner (Asylum 7E-2008).

Waits initially seemed an interestingly despondent, jazz-influenced singer-songwriter, absolutely the most interesting of all the new performers on Asylum's roster. But his third album, a two-record live set, takes him into more perilous waters; a series of long, Kerouac-influenced monologues which tend to grate after the first couple of listenings. Waits is going to have to either sing more often or make records less frequently, spoken-words recordings are still superfluous. "Big Joe and Phantom 309," a remake of Red Sovine's country trucker's classic, is a first-rate blend of tale-telling and music, however. That would seem to be the route Waits ought to go.

A Highland Change of Pace

HIGHLAND

The Devil Made Me Do It, a change of pace in high school dramatics, will be presented by the Senior Washington Club of Highland High School. The major fund-raising event of the year, the play will be presented at the high school auditorium Nov. 14 and 15.

Donna Caccio plays the female lead taking the part of a college student who becomes possessed by many different personalities. The effect of this on the school is shocking, as may well be imagined.

Paul Davison, remembered from his junior class portrayal of Newton Fuller in George Washington Stayed Here, has the male lead in this year's production. David Delia does an excellent job as Murdock, the exorcist, who deviously attempts to gain control of the school funds through the control of Dody, played by Donna Caccio.

A scalloped edge of matching lace, trimmed with delicate crystal pleated organza, created the mandarin styled collar. A deep border of lace and organza pleating encircled the hemline.

Mrs. Bonnie Lindhorst of Kingston and Miss Judy Benton, sister of the bridegroom, Highland, were matron and maid of honor, respectively. Other attendants were Mrs. Deborah DeCicco of Kingston and Mrs. Carla Hoy, West Camp, cousin of the bride.

SPORT PARADE

Milton Richman,
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — "The number of ballplayers who've hurt themselves drinking is astronomical. They think it's the main thing to do. You know how it is. You're an athlete, you got a fine body, you can hold your liquor. Who's gonna tell you no? You're on top of the world and can do whatever you wanna do. You think you can."

Those last four words come out of Don Newcombe's mouth far differently, a lot hollower, than the others do.

Ostensibly, the big one-time Dodger pitching ace is talking about baseball players in general, but actually he's talking about himself as well.

"I started with beer," says the 49-year-old Newcombe, the National League's MVP in 1956 as well as the first Cy Young Award winner. "I also drank wine as a kid going to school in New Jersey. Port was my favorite. I'd drink it, come home feeling silly and then throw up all over the house and all over myself. I was only thirteen-fourteen years old, but big for my age. Six feet tall and one hundred eighty-five pounds. I was so big, my mother and father never paid that much attention to me. I could hide things from them, like my drinking, pretty easily, the same way kids are doing today."

Looking at confident, customtailored Don Newcombe today, he symbolizes nothing but success. He speaks much better now than he ever did as a ballplayer, beautifully, in fact, and the way he carries himself and dresses, he makes most movie and TV stars look like small potatoes. On the business side, he's director of community relations for the Dodgers, vice president of a bank, a Chamber of Commerce executive and a dedicated advocate in behalf of Alcoholism Awareness Month, sponsored by the New York City affiliate of the National Council on Alcoholism.

Some people know Newcombe had a drinking problem; few realize how close he came to ending up in the gutter.

"Every time I see one of those Skid Row bums, I feel sorry for him," says Newcombe. "I look at him and say to myself there but for the grace of God—and a magnificent woman—go I."

The magnificent woman is Newcombe's present wife, Billie, his second wife, and he tells you straight out if it wasn't for her, he'd probably be dead.

"We got married in 1960," he says. "She neither smokes or drinks, but here I was drinking like there was no tomorrow. I was going through the traumatic experience of being a reasonably successful athlete on the way out. I didn't know how to handle it. I expected to find all the answers in the bottom of a bottle, so I drank. I was a nasty souvabeen when I was drinking. It got to the point where Billie couldn't stand me any longer. She didn't want to be married to a drunk."

"One morning she decided she had enough. She had given me three babies, Don, Jr., Kelly and Toni, and she packed her bags, took the kids and was about to leave when I asked her for one more chance. I must have asked her for 'one more chance' a hundred times. She said there was no way she could ever believe me again and I said to her 'what if I swear to you on the head of that boy'—meaning four-year-old Don, Jr.—'I'll never have another drink, would you believe me then?'"

Don Newcombe's wife really didn't, but she gave him one more chance anyway.

That was nine years ago. Newcombe was consuming two fifths a day then, but he hasn't had a drink since.

Alcoholics Anonymous didn't do it. Don Newcombe did it himself.

"The AA does a great job, but I never belonged," he says. "I was ashamed to tell people Don Newcombe, the great Dodger pitcher, was an alcoholic. I just couldn't do it. How bad did I get when I was drinking? I'll tell you how bad I got. I almost killed myself a dozen times. One night Billie and I were in Cincinnati and I was driving on the wrong side of the road. The only thing that brought me to my senses was when she screamed there was a car coming the other way."

Newcombe, who came to the Dodgers shortly after Jackie Robinson and Roy Campanella, says most of what he has today he owes to baseball, but also blames baseball, in a way, for contributing to his drinking. That's hard to buy, but he explains it this way:

"Being a pioneer in baseball with Jackie and Roy, and being black, we couldn't relieve our tensions the way the others did. The only way was to go to your hotel room, get some beer and drink. Jackie and Roy were stronger than me. They never had that problem. I did."

In the literature the Council on Alcoholism people put out, they describe Don Newcombe as a "recovered alcoholic." He prefers the word "recovering" instead.

"With an alcoholic, it's always a day to day process," says Newcombe. "You keep going hoping you're never going to be foolish enough to pick up that first one again."

Although he won 27 games in 1956 and 149 in all, Newcombe always kept hearing he "couldn't win the big ones," especially after starting the seventh game of the 1956 World Series with the Yankees. Yogi Berra ripped him for two home runs, he was knocked out in the fourth inning and the Yanks went on to win, 7-0. That was a big one he lost.

"This is one 'big one' I'm gonna win," Don Newcombe says firmly. "I'm gonna do it, or I'm gonna die trying."

Huguenots Blast Marlboro, 37 to 18

NEW PALTZ — New Palitz High survived a scare from Marlboro and came alive with four second half touchdowns to roll to a 37-18 Ulster County Athletic League victory here Saturday.

The upstart Dukes, who closed out their season with a 2-7 record, jumped out to a 12 point lead on the slumbering Hugie defense and scored a later touchdown to trail only 21-18 as late as the third quarter. The winners, though, revived themselves in time and once again demonstrated the league's most explosive offense.

New Palitz coach John Ford felt defense was the key. "We revamped it this week and put some new faces in. It started to play in the second quarter. Their third touchdown was kind of a freak play."

The Huguenot defensive unit has had some rough spots this year, but it held Marlboro almost entirely ineffective in the second half. Running back John Savago used his time on the field to score three touchdowns and gain 101 yards to lead the winners to their fourth victory against three losses and a tie.

A 75 yard bomb from Dave Onusko to Anthony Monroe, and Onusko's six yard run gave the Dukes the early lead. Savago scored once before the half to make it a 12-7 contest. Jerry Markes from two yards and Savago from 25 scored TD's for the Hugies in the third quarter. The Dukes got their final points when Monroe on a halfback option fired to Gus Congemi with a helping

SAUGERTIES

The jubilation that comes with being league champion arrived anti-climactically for Arlington High School football fans in the glow of a warm Saturday afternoon. Saugerties, the victim, did not roll over and play dead, but clearly lacked the precision and talent fielded by the 7-0 DCSL champs.

It was Arlington head coach Bill Murphy's first year at the helm, and the middle-aged graying man chewed a wad of gum reflectively after the 26-6 win, seemingly impassive about the honor attained by the first Admiral team since the Freedom Plains crew captured one quarter of the crown (along with Saugerties) some three years before. According to several recollections, it had been "a good seven or eight years" since Arlington was The Number One.

Murphy, who has consistently downplayed his team's contender status in early going this season, professed no surprise at the outcome, and commented of his team's performance against 0-6-1 Saugerties, "We were uptight today. We didn't give our best effort!"

While it was Murphy's first year at head coach, he was quite familiar with Arlington personnel, having spent time as backfield coach. The Admiral collective clicked with efficient timing and blocking with four backs compiling the bulk of the team's 223 yards rushing: Tim Mackey, Bob Seils, John Knight, and Mark Nassar.

Breezing to a 12-0 first quarter, Arlington was bogged down in the second and third quarters through a combination of aroused Sawyer defensive pluck, fortunate timing to end the half, and two lost fumbles in the third period.

But the champions left little doubt as to who was in control of the game going to the wire, scoring once with the first team and once with reserves in closing minutes. Another second team touchdown was negated by a facemask penalty.

Bright spot for the large home crowd was an 82-yard second period kickoff return by halfback Steve Martin, and this single action seemed to galvanize the Sawyers to superior efforts until the house of cards fell down late in the game.

Martin's electric run set the score at 12-6, not such a difficult ratio to contend with at the halftime break. He would not have made it without a decisive block along the right sidelines by end Pat Harder, who wiped out the final defender.

Otherwise, the Saugerties offense could not move effectively. Not possessed of a strong stable of running backs anyway this season, the Sawyers had to contend with injuries suffered in the bruising Kingston contest; backs Mike Tiano and Jim Marino hobbled along the sidelines on crutches watching the action, and injury prone center Karl Lezette's expertise could not be called upon either.

Thus, halfback Martin (150 pounds) shared running duties with 135-pound Mike Kerbert and guard turned fullback Lars Hauck. The Sawyers were never able to advance past midfield, and were unable to put two first downs together, totaling 79 yards rushing.

Starting quarterback Cliff Benjamin was spelled periodically for passing series by Tim Cole.

Arlington marched 60 yards in seven plays to begin scoring, capped by fullback Seils ten-yard off tackle slant. Mackey's PAT run was no good. The Admirals made it 12-0 the next time they got the ball, as QB Jerry Seager hit end Kevin Kelly all alone and going away for a 52-yard pass play. An attempted conversion pass to Kelly was broken up by Steve Martin.

The scoreboard did not move after Martin's touchdown run until 8:00 of the fourth quarter, when Seils ran up the middle from ten yards out and a pitchout to Mackey made it 20-6. Following a negated nine yard TD run, the Admirals' reserves finished it off with a 30-yard pass from QB Alan Holsapple to halfback Mitch Bernasconi. The extra point run by Rols Bartschi was unsuccessful.

Asked for the toughest DCSL team Arlington has played this season, coach Murphy settled on Beacon. The Sawyers travel to Beacon next Saturday to conclude their season, while the Admirals will seek to keep their slate clean hosting John Jay.

eye on the ball. Sliding across the ground, he picked it up, got on his feet and fired a long downfield pass, hitting Steve Ross, who was all alone on the 12 and pranced into the end zone. Castaldo placekicked the extra point to make it a 20-7 game. Ross caught six passes for 87 yards, including the TD. Onteora completed its season with a 2-6-1 record. Liberty is 3-5 with one game left to play.

Wallkill Rout Ellenville

ELLENVILLE — Wallkill High's main objective was to keep alive its chances for a piece of the Ulster County Athletic League title Saturday. The Panthers took no chances with that chance and crushed Ellenville, 49-0.

Wallkill coach Jerry Trezza would like to think that there was a little more to it than just a big win over a last place team.

"We executed well, and we didn't make the mistakes we've made in the past. Moving George Thomas from fullback to tailback has made a big difference in our team. Our line is blocking better, and George had gone over 600 yards in his last three games."

Thomas scored three of the Panther TD's. One was one yard, one was 56 yards and another was 90 yards. Dan Inzell got the winners their first two touchdowns on scramblers of 36 and 39 yards, and Roger Brooks added another pair, one on a 50 pass interception and the other on a six yard run in the final period.

Kicking machine Greg Palen converted all seven extra points and is now 21 for 21 in that department for the season.

Ellenville finished in the UCAL cellar with an 0-8-1 mark. Wallkill improved to 6-2 and needs a win next to tie Pine Bush for the title.

"We're motivated," said

Trezza. "We know we can only get a tie, but we have no one to blame but ourselves for that."

AFC Central Shakeup Due

(By UPI)

There hasn't been a race like this one since the National Football League realigned its divisions in 1970. The race is in the American Conference Central Division and after seven games—half the regular season—three clubs are tied for the division lead with 6-1 records.

That will change today when two of the leaders, Pittsburgh and Houston, clash. Cincinnati, the other 6-1 club, is at Denver.

The Pittsburgh-Houston encounter matches the two best defenses in the AFC. Houston, under first-year coach Bum Phillips, has allowed just 79 points while the Steelers, who are looking for a club record sixth straight victory, have permitted just 85.

It should be an awesome struggle. The last time the Steelers lost last season en route to the Super Bowl title, it was to Houston and the Pittsburgh offense managed just 84 yards total offense.

Steelers Coach Chuck Noll figures it now boils down to a seven-game season.

"The win at Cincinnati last week got us to an even position," Noll said. "Being two down or tied for first place, there's a hell of a difference. So we've got a seven-game season the rest of the way because of the tie we've got with Houston and Cincinnati."

Veteran linebacker Andy Russell agreed.

"This is the start of a seven-game season for us and I think we're going to have to win all seven," he said. "There's no sense getting all uptight or emotional about it, but that's the way it is. We're facing a good club. The Oilers don't make the mistakes they used to and they put a lot more pressure on the defense with their offense because of it. They have the running backs to possess the ball for long stretches. Then they get you to overplay the run and they kill you with a pass to Ken Burrough or Billy Johnson ... They have always been a very tough team for us to beat."

The Steelers offense, overshadowed last season by the famed "Steel Curtain" defense, has been playing well lately. Terry Bradshaw ranks second in the AFC in passing, Franco Harris is third in rushing and Lynn Swann tied for third in receiving.

Houston, meanwhile, has gotten its offense from quarterback Dan Pastorini and the kick and punt returning heroics of Johnson. Also, Don Hardeman, the No. 1 draft choice from Texas A&I, is ranked fifth in the AFC in rushing and second-year back Ronnie Coleman has been outstanding. "The Pittsburgh front four is great," says Oilers center Carl Mauk. "They're even better than that because they've intimidated most people. But this Oilers team is not one to back down from anyone. We'll get down with them Sunday if that's what they want to do."

"We're no longer taken lightly," said Elvin Bethea, who along with Curley Culp and Tody Smith form Houston's imposing front three. He feels the Steelers will come right at Houston.

"They popped Franco through there good last week and with us having only three men up front, I don't see any reason for them to change," he explained.

Cincinnati, meanwhile, which suffered its first loss last week after six straight victories, will try to hold its share of the lead against a Denver club struggling to keep pace with Oakland in the AFC West despite a rash of injuries. The one felt most deeply belongs to Otis Armstrong, the NFL's leading rusher last season.

The game matches Denver's No. 1 ranked pass offense against Cincinnati's top ranked pass defense.

Looking at the remaining seven games, Houston seems to have the worst of the schedule. Pittsburgh faces Houston twice, Kansas City, the New York Jets, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Los Angeles. Three of them are under .500. Cincinnati takes on Denver, Buffalo, Cleveland, Houston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and San Diego, a schedule that includes four clubs under .500.

Houston, however, has Pittsburgh twice, Miami, Cincinnati, San Francisco, Oakland and Cleveland. That group includes only two teams under .500 but four straight games against clubs which have lost only one game.

In other games Sunday, Atlanta is at Minnesota, San Francisco at Los Angeles, Washington at the New York Giants, the Jets at Miami, Baltimore at Buffalo, New Orleans at Oakland, St. Louis at Philadelphia, Cleveland at Detroit, New England at San Diego and Green Bay at Chicago. Kansas City is at Dallas Monday night.

Fran Tarkenton continues his assault on John Unitas' records for pass completions and touchdowns as Minnesota, the only remaining unbeaten club, takes on Atlanta. Tarkenton is only 49 completions and 10 TD passes behind Unitas' NFL records.

Los Angeles could just about wrap up the NFC West by beating San Francisco for the 11th straight time. The Rams enter with a four-game lead.

The NFC East race is as hotly contested as the AFC Central, through all three clubs tied for first—Washington, Dallas and St. Louis—each have two losses.

All three are favored to win this weekend.

The Dolphins look for their seventh straight victory after an opening game loss when they host the Jets, a club they crushed 43-0 just three weeks ago, and O.J. Simpson, who went over the 1,000-yard mark last week, begins the countdown toward his own record 2,003 for a season. Simpson has 1,005 yards.

Oakland's offense finally got untracked with a 42-point burst last week and figures to keep rolling against New Orleans.

On Kingston Card

Irish John Turner, 140, of Long Island will face Rinaldo Burgos, 147, of Connecticut in a six-round bout as part of the boxing show at the Municipal Auditorium November 21. Turner is a former Golden Gloves fighter who has competed in international matches for the United States. As a pro, he is unbeaten in six bouts with six knockouts. The fight card here will be headed by a 10-round lightweight battle between Domenico Monaco and Louis Vega.

New Paltz Zips York College, 2-0

NEW PALTZ New Paltz State's first soccer season under coach Bob Joly ended successfully Saturday as the Hawks shutout visiting York College, 2-0.

The win gave New Paltz a final record of five wins, eight defeats and one tie.

"Both teams played well but we were a little more together," Joly said of the win over York. "The team showed a lot of desire for the last game of the season."

Paul Matecki and Russell Smith (with Matecki assisting) were the Hawk goal scorers. Joly said both were "outstanding."

The Hawks dominated play, outshooting York, 21-3.

Joly noted that all but three of his players will return next season as New Paltz continues on the road back to respectability in soccer after several lean seasons.

Tiger JV Romp, 40-18, For Eighth Straight Win

BEACON Kingston High's junior varsity football clinched the unofficial DCSL JV championship Saturday with a come-from-behind 40-18 victory over Beacon.

Coach Dan McGrane's club, 8-0, trailed 18-0 in the second quarter, but a 38 yard end around TD by Paul Neal and two point conversion pass from Jay Foust to Jim Brown got Kingston off and rolling.

The second half belong to the little Tigers. They put 12 points on the board in the third quarter on passes of 41 and 57 yards from Foust to Jim Brown, then added 20 more in the final period.

In that fourth quarter, Brown went four yards for one TD, Rick Dossie scooped up a fumble and rambled 15 yards for the score; and Mark Ventriglia ran 57 yards with an intercepted pass. A pass from Foust to Ed McCullough produced two points.

"It was the game of the year for us," said McGrane. "The defense was superb in the second half." Heading the defense were Bob Easter with two interceptions, Rich Dickerson with a fumble recovery, and Billy Reynolds, who was alert on a recovered onside kick.

Kingston is at Newburgh next Saturday.

Onteora Booters Advance, 5-0

BOICEVILLE

Top seeded Onteora High was the only one of four Ulster County Athletic League soccer teams to advance past the first round of the Section Nine B Division tournament Friday. The undefeated Indians avenged the only stain on their record, a tie that came in the last regular season game against Rondout, by eliminating the Ganders, 5-0 on a big offensive show by Jim Stoothoff.

OCS will go against Washingtonville, a 2-1 winner in overtime against Coleman, in a semifinal battle Tuesday at the New Paltz State field. The other semi has Goshen meeting James O'Neill.

Goshen whipped the UCAL's third place club, New Paltz, by a 2-0 count. O'Neill defeated Chester, 4-0.

Stoothoff ripped his first shot through the RVC defense in the second quarter to give OCS a 1-0 halftime lead. As the Indians took command of the field, Stoothoff slammed a pair of unassisted goals home in the fourth quarter then set up teammate Chris Sauer with an assist to lift the count to 4-0.

Sauer struck again in the fourth quarter, this time on a Bob Berkeley assist.

Coleman took a lot of teams into overtime this season, but the extra periods worked in Washingtonville's favor at the Wizards' field. Danny Clark, who had given the winners the lead in the game's second quarter, scored an unassisted shot 50 seconds into the second OT to end the Statesmen's season.

Joe Schell, Coleman's leading scorer this year, knotted the game at 1-1 in the fourth quarter on an assist from Steve Pechloff.

New Paltz caught the Glad-iators a little flat from their recent Orange County League championship victory over Monticello, but it was not the Huges' day to capitalize. New Paltz had a chance to throw the contest into a 1-1 tie with a penalty kick in the third quarter, but it missed and Goshen went on to clinch the contest with Ed Heller's fourth quarter shot.

Arlington, Rhinebeck Win Sectional Soccer Titles

POUGHKEEPSIE

Two Dutchess County Scholastic League soccer teams won Section One championships Saturday.

DCSL champion Arlington, top seeded in the AA bracket, completed a sweep by beating Mount Vernon, 2-1. The losers had eliminated Kingston in the semi-final round.

In Class C, Rhinebeck High emerged victorious by zipping Edgemont, 1-0.

The Class B title went to Rye, rated No. 1 in the state, 4-0 over Byram Hills. The Class A game ended in a 0-0 tie between Horace Greeley and Fox Lane. The two clubs will meet again Monday.

Miller Beats Newburgh

NEWBURGH

Frank Howell ran 97 yards with an intercepted pass and Tim Murphy scored on a seven yard run as Miller Junior High beat Newburgh, 14-6, Saturday.

A Kirk Maisch run produced one two-point conversion. Miller is 2-4-1 on the season.

New Paltz JV Team A Perfect 9-0 for Season

NEW PALTZ

A powerful New Paltz High School junior varsity football team completed a perfect season Friday by blanking Marlboro, 20-0. It was the ninth consecutive victory for Coach Bill Freer's squad.

New Paltz opened the scoring in the first quarter with a 26 yard TD pass from Kyle Peterson to Gary Smith. In the second session, Randy Freer ran 25 yards for a score and followed it with a two point conversion. The little Huges closed the door in the fourth quarter on a 20 yard pass from Peterson to Luke Garvey.

Freer, a tailback, gained 1,000 yards and scored 100 points on the season. Peterson, the club's ace quarterback, hit 38 of 69 passes for 746 yards, good for 13 touchdowns. He scored seven TD's on his own, kicked seven extra points and was responsible for five two point conversions.

Also starring for New Paltz this season was Phil Donahue, who gained 430 yards on the ground for four touchdowns and led the club in pass receiving with 15 catches. Gary Smith caught five TD passes for NP.

On defense, Coach Freer cited the play of linebackers Robbie Ferrante and Steve Wells and tackle Will Scott.

The New Paltz team scored 257 points to the opposition's 26. It had six shutouts, including the last five games in a row.

Fox in 'Fair Condition'

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Nelie Fox, the slap-hitting, tobacco-chewing former second baseman with three major league clubs, is in fair condition at a Baltimore hospital. At the request of his wife, no information has been released about the nature of his illness.

University Hospital officials Friday corrected a clerical error which had caused Fox, 47, to be listed in critical condition. A spokeswoman said Fox was admitted to Baltimore Cancer Research Center Oct. 29 in critical condition but that his status improved shortly thereafter and hospital information officers did not get the word because of a "communications breakdown."

"I just got a little weak and they brought me in for a checkup. The doctors won't tell me anything," said Fox, who was called "Little Nell" or "Foxie" during his playing days.

Bob (T) Smith had a respectable runnerup effort, a 690 that takes sixth place on the Top Ten. Smith, who also owns the No. 1 triple, a 730, and the No. 9 score, 682, started with 212 and ended with 246.

Other big hitters included Jerry Woodvine, who parlayed a pair of 246's into 665, and Charles Manfro Sr. who shot 242-661. Herb Petersen gave Porsi a run with a 266 solo in a 629 set.

The Saugerties Rainbow loop also made a contribution to the Top Ten as Jan Veltrie claimed a share of the women's tenth place with a 596. She had games of 208 and 226 and managed to tie Joan Jameson for the last position.

Betting A Health Hazard

NEW YORK (UPI) — Betting on sporting events may be hazardous to your health, says Dr. Harold Karpman, a Los Angeles cardiologist.

He feels the emotional stress of spectators "may well be as great as or greater than the physical effort put out by the athletes they watch...and their hearts are extraordinarily less capable of coping with tense than players."

Karpman, an associate clinical professor at the UCLA School of Medicine, says the heart beats up to 144,000 times daily. He explains that people going to an arena or stadium once or twice a week work up an emotional stress that accelerates the thumping of this vital organ.

"Betting, so prevalent in American sports with daily wagering on horse races and the point-spreads in basketball and football, could bring additional stress to spectators."

"On the other hand, the athlete is in good condition and generally can absorb more strain on the heart than the sedentary, cheering, emotional spectator."

Karpman writes in his book, Your Second Life (J.P. Tarcher, Inc.), there is a phenomenal amount of heart activity and heart tension on the player, coach or manager.

"The public often wonders how these people can be hit with a cardiac ailment when seemingly they are in peak condition. After all, many coaches and managers work out with their players."

When heart illness does occur, Karpman recommends the patient enter a prescribed exercise regimen after a period of recuperation. He cited the cases of former New York Knick star Dave Stallworth and Pittsburgh Pirates manager Danny Murtaugh as examples of people who refused to permit heart trouble to curtail their careers.

Stallworth went on to play on the Knicks 1970 National Basketball Association championship team. Murtaugh turned down any nonsense about retirement and skippered the Pirates to several National League division titles.

Karpman says it's important that the victim of a heart attack does not allow his usual life to style to change on recovery, whether it be athletics, business or even sex.

Looking for any edge they can find, professional athletes are turning to Transcendental Meditation (TM) in increasing numbers.

At least that's the opinion of Bob Oates, a regional director of the Institute of Fitness and Athletic Excellence and a semi-pro quarterback for the New York Rams, who spoke before the Kingston Kiwanis Club last week.

"TM is not a religion or philosophy," Oates contended, "but is simply a natural mental technique which anyone can learn."

Likening it to taking a car in for a tune-up, he reported TM allows an athlete to have a "more orderly functioning" mind and nervous system. "Under TM the body gets a deeper rest than sleep," said Oates, "and there is decreased anxiety."

Oates claimed that TM has aided the Phillies all-star shortstop Larry Bowa and professional tennis player Roscoe Tanner, among others. He added that three baseball clubs, the Phillies, Pirates, and Cards, are running special TM programs for their players.

Seventeen players on one pro hockey team recently discovered TM, according to Oates, but he said he could not disclose the name of the team. "Professional athletes are under a tremendous strain to perform well," Oates observed. "If they don't perform they are on the bench."

Oates has taught TM to a number of professional athletes, including Jets quarterback Joe Namath, Pirates outfielder-first baseman Willie Stargell, figure skater Julia Tandoock, and Redskins defensive back Brian Salter.

He reports that professional athletes have found TM improves their mental alertness and concentration and enables them to become "more calm under pressure."

These athletes, said Oates, generally pick up TM faster than most other persons because it has very practical applications for them. With TM, Bowa, for example, found his tensions and anxieties were reduced, declared Oates. Before embracing this technique, the shortstop found little things bothering him and affecting his performance for days afterward.

TM is growing rapidly among professional athletes," said Oates. "They certainly wouldn't do it if it didn't work."

Oates also estimated that TM currently is being practiced by 1,500 persons in the Mid-Hudson area, including several hundred in Kingston.

Tennenbaum at Ithaca

ITHACA Steve Tennenbaum, a sophomore from Ellenville, is a member of the Ithaca College football team that sought its eighth win of the season Saturday against RIT.

Tennenbaum, a former Daily Freeman Player of the Year, is a reserve running back but has seen some action this fall. Steve has carried eight times for 28 yards and has caught two passes for 18 yards.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Tennenbaum, Steve is a physical education major at Ithaca.

Going into Saturday's game, the Bombers had won 17 straight regular season titles and were ranked No. 1 in the Lambert Bowl standings as the East's top Division III football team. Ithaca was among the top five colleges in several statistical categories in Division III including scoring defense (two points a game), in which it was No. 1. The Bombers were second in rushing offense, third in rushing defense, and fourth in total defense.

Tax Breaks for Solar Energy Device Owners

(By UPI)

A tax break measure for homeowners and businesses installing solar energy devices died in the Missouri Senate last spring because the author "couldn't get a lot of people excited about the bill."

But William J. Cason, senate president pro tempore, plans to introduce his bill again in 1976 when parts of the country may be in the midst of an energy-short winter.

"I will put it in January and press for an early hearing," the Clinton Democrat said. "I think we've got a better shot at it this time."

Cason is typical of legislators in several states trying to spur development of solar systems for heating and cooling. Chances are that Cason and others will find more exciting times for solar proposals as the energy crunch deepens.

Only nine states — Indiana, Colorado, Maryland, Montana, New Hampshire, North and South Dakota, Oregon and Texas — have looked to the sun as a practical energy-producer worthy of tax breaks. In congress, the house has liked the idea too, but the senate has yet to act.

Federal experts estimate that 25 per cent of the nation's energy needs will be met through solar systems by the 21st Century.

Those who would seek to harness the sun are rapidly gaining stature with researchers in oil, coal, natural gas and nuclear power. Federal funding for solar research and development hit $56 million this year and will double in fiscal 1976.

Indiana led all states in 1974 with the first property tax deduction. So far, only one homeowner has filed for an annual deduction that ranges up to a maximum $2,000.

"We might be classified as looking down the road because not enough people are doing it yet," said Wayne Pruett, director of Indiana's property valuation division. "Eventually we may have a lot of them."

Robert Henderson, director of Indianapolis' Center for Advanced Research, cited a lack of "enabling equipment people can afford." He said production of solar collectors so far is "pretty much handmade" when they ought to be mass-produced.

"I am certain the desire is there, if the right package can be arranged," Henderson said. A visit to a solar house in the Colorado Rockies prompted Cason to try for tax relief in Missouri. His bill passed in committee but never reached floor debate.

"I couldn't get a lot of people excited about the bill," Cason said. "I worked as hard as I could but it had a low number and that pushed it back."

"We need all the research we can get but I know it's becoming economically feasible. And, it really doesn't cost us anything to give a tax break."

At least eight solar homes are under construction in New Hampshire where Aristotile Onassis proposed $900 million oil refinery on the seacoast angered residents.

"Solar heating is feasible," said Marshall Cobeligh, an Onassis lobbyist now directing the governor's energy council. "It's like television when it started."

"At first you paid $1,000 for a five inch screen. The next year, you paid $900 for a 12 inch screen. It wasn't long before you had a 25 inch screen for $400."

New Hampshire's local option tax exemptions for solar homes took effect Aug. 15 but communities probably won't decide until this spring. A New Hampshire firm, meantime, is developing a solar energy unit to heat water and operate filter pumps for swimming pools.

The far-out possibilities of solar energy also have intrigued federal and state governments.

The U.S. Forest Service erected the world's first solar-powered outhouse at a scenic overlook near Yellowstone National Park. A pair of solar cell panels on the roof produce electricity to run pumps that flush the toilets.

And, the world's largest solar building is in operation at Las Cruces, N.M. The $1.5 million structure at New Mexico State University gets 80 per cent of its heating and cooling from the sun by way of 330 rooftop collector units.

Massachusetts Electric Co. decided to ask 100 homeowners to put up $200 each to install test solar energy units and was inundated with volunteers. More than 5,000 applicants responded, forcing the power firm to draw lots.

Solar panels costing $800 to $1,400 per unit will be installed in the front yard of 100 homes in Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Rhode Island. They will be linked to conventional hot water heaters in the hope sunshine will lower electrical costs.

"It's aroused a lot of interest in the professional engineering and academic communities and from people who have experimented on their own with solar power," a company spokesman said. "It's been a very welcomed change from negative public response a utility usually gets because of rate hikes."

California — the state that usually is in the forefront of the nation's newest fads — has no tax exemption-deduction for solar energy systems. But, several bills are pending that may be acted upon when the legislature resumes next year.

Maine's legislature overwhelmingly defeated a solar tax exempt proposal this year and sponsors have no plans to reintroduce the measure in 1976. Bills in Washington state and Louisiana got nowhere this year but Iowa, Oklahoma and Idaho are looking into possible tax incentives.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Early trends are encouraging in the nationwide screening program for breast cancer, the American Cancer Society and the American College of Radiology have reported.

The demonstration project uses mammography and thermography — a heat sensing technique — as well as palpation. Cancer tissue tends to be hotter than surrounding tissue.

So far, 669 cancer cases have been spotted. Of these, 79.5 per cent had not spread to lymph nodes in the armpit.

Other statistics for the United States show cancer is detected in cancer-free armpit nodes in only about 45 per cent of the new cases.

chances for long-term survival and cure.

The demonstration project which started up on a small scale in 1973 is co-sponsored by the American Cancer Society and the National Cancer Institute. Some 200,000 women have signed up and another 70,000 will be included in the program. All 26 detection centers were activated by mid-1974.

The examinations will continue until each woman enrolled has had four examinations over a period of four years. Then they will be followed medically for five years.

It is hoped that during the demonstration and follow-through period the medical and scientific community will learn a lot more about how to detect more cancers in the early, most curable stage.

There has been no downward trend in breast cancer mortality in the last 40 years. Nearly 33,000 women will die of the disease this year and an estimated 88,000 new cases will be diagnosed.

Doctors involved in the project highly praised mammography — X-rays of the breast — for its help in identifying microscopic precancerous lesions and minimal cancer.

The latter appeared to be the size of a pinhead. Authorities said anything that small would be missed in any screening program that included just palpation.

As diagnostic methods improve, the doctors noted, it may be possible to treat breast cancer without removing the breast. Dr. Guy Newell said that goal has a high priority among many cancer-fighters and researchers supported by the Institute.

Dr. William Pomerance tackled the big mammography controversy. Some authorities, including Dr. John C. Bailar III, editor of the Journal of the National Cancer Institute, are raising questions about exposing healthy breasts to radiation, a cancer-causer in enough accumulated dosage over a period of time. The latency period for some breast cancers is believed to be 10 to 15 years.

He said at current doses of radiation if one million women had mammograms annually about 20 cancers would occur as a result of the exposure to the diagnostic radiation. But 2,000 cancers would be found.

EAGLE BAY, N.Y. (UPI) — The crops have been harvested. The hunters hope a good fall deer kill will bolster the winter meat supply. "Ganienkeh" is preparing for a second hard winter.

It's small — located on a 612-acre, state-owned former girls' camp near this remote Adirondacks resort community.

The Indians of the so-called "nation" — their number has ranged from a score to possibly 100 — are locked in an often bitter dispute with white landowners, neighboring townspeople and state and federal officials who want to evict them.

About 18 months ago, the Indians moved into the abandoned encampment almost unnoticed.

They were determined to hunt, fish, and live off the land in the ways of their forefathers, they said.

A 1794 treaty between the United States and the Mohawk Indian Nation, they said, gave them legal ownership of the campsite. While they were at it, they claimed nine million more acres in northern New York and Vermont.

But the Indians soon ordered snowmobilers and hunters off the camp land. Nearby white residents began to talk of fears the Indians would soon try to take over their privately owned land. A Ganienkeh spokesman denied this.

"There is plenty of land here for everyone," said Kakwirakeron. "We don't want any private land, just the so-called state land that is rightfully ours anyway."

Some white residents hoped the new Indian "nation" would develop into another of the area's many tourist attractions but others said the Indians were damaging the area's resort image for both winter snowmobiling and hunting and for summer camping and hiking.

About a year ago, it came close to a full-scale confrontation. That was when two whites were seriously wounded by Indian gunfire while passing Ganienkeh in cars. The Indians claimed somebody else shot first.

But they refused to allow state authorities onto the camp to investigate the case. State police surrounded it for a while but avoided pressing the matter.

Angry whites talked of taking the law into their own hands; of forcibly removing the Indians. The Indians vowed to defend what they said was theirs but also talked of peace.

A group of local whites called the Concerned Persons of the Central Adirondacks (COPCA) still campaigns against the Indian takeover.

Mike Blair speaks for COPCA. He says the Indians are "renegades" and suggests they may have ties with pro-Communist groups abroad. He says the state should have thrown them out at the start.

State Environmental Conservation Commissioner Ogden R. Reid is trying to work out a settlement with peace talk but lawsuits and countersuits have also been filed in state and federal courts.

"We are hopeful that discussions can begin in the next several weeks," a Reid aide said. "Until now, a lack of confidence and trust has been holding up any progress. A honest discussion of the situation must precede any meaningful negotiations."

Life in the heavily-guarded encampment remains a mystery. Whites are barred from Ganienkeh. The Indians say this is "for security reasons."

Young sentries with braided hair and bows and arrows emerge from a split log cabin to confront visitors at the camp gate. Polite but distant, they say whites are not welcome.

How many occupants the camp has is difficult to determine. Nearby whites say traffic to the camp nearly stopped last winter, but a stream of cars poured in and out last summer. State police believe there may be about 50 permanent residents.

Who the Indians are and where they came from is also unclear. Some are believed to have come from nearby Mohawk reservations. Others, believed to have been among the unemployed, appear to have come in later from as far away as Texas.

Several minor incidents were reported during the first few days of the hunting season this fall when Indians confronted hunters who had crossed onto camp land.

"When hunters come onto our land, we ask them to leave," said one Indian, Karoniakta. "We want no problems and will cause no problems as long as whites respect our borders."

But their official spokesmen eagerly discussed their cause with reporters. Apparently well-educated, they want to tell their side of the story to offset the COPCA version. They also have traveled across the state to talk to various groups. They collect donations of money, food and clothing in the process.

The Indians say they are determined to remain but now talk more of an eventual settlement.

"The future of our children and grandchildren is bright," said Kakwirakeron. "We hope all people will have peace in their hearts and reason in their minds."

HERB AND BARBARA SWEET

Area Couple Seek TM Degree

KINGSTON
One of the most enthusiastic disciples of Transcendental Meditation in this area is Herb Sweet. Beginning Nov. 19, he—and his wife—will begin a new phase in their relationship with TM that will let them teach, as well as preach, the science of daily meditation.

Along with his wife, Barbara, Sweet has enrolled in a nine-month teacher training program. When they complete the course, the two local residents will join several thousand other TM practitioners in this country certified to conduct classes and lectures on the science of meditation.

Sweet, a systems analyst at IBM Kingston, began meditating in August, 1973. He says that he detected an almost immediate change in his emotional complexion; he suffered less anxiety, was more tolerant of others, relaxed more easily and developed improved, and more efficient, work habits.

His wife, an IBM programmer, noticed the change. She began meditating in December of that year and found, like her husband, that TM eliminated many of the anxieties and tensions of day-to-day life.

One of the more fascinating aspects of Transcendental Meditation is that you can practice it without really understanding why or how it works. Curiosity got the better of Mr. and Mrs. Sweet; they enrolled in several advanced meditation courses and attended several advanced lectures. Curious about the theoretical aspects of TM, and the relationship between meditation and psychological changes, they applied for admission in the instructional program.

For Mr. and Mrs. Sweet, the teacher training program will begin Nov. 19 when they leave Kingston for Quebec, Canada for three months of preliminary lectures and classes with several hundred future TM teachers from throughout the world. On Feb. 20, they'll return to this area and conduct TM lectures on their own during the evenings for three more months. In May, they'll leave for Switzerland and a three-month program of intensive study under Maharishi Mahesh Yogi.

Upon completion of that final phase of the program, the Sweets, who have been granted a leave of absence by IBM, will return to this area and their respective jobs and serve as TM instructors during evening hours and on weekends.

At present, there are nine TM teachers who conduct classes and lectures in the Mid-Hudson Valley. The Students International Meditation Society expects to open a lecture center in Lake Katrine shortly, where future classes and programs will be conducted.

Urges Profit Cut As Housing Boost

JIAMESHA LAKE
The new president of the New York State Builders Association says the housing industry in New York is "near a standstill" and calls upon the industry to "cut profits, if necessary, as well as overhead and construction costs to help spur a recovery."

In remarks before the recent annual convention here, Julius Mehrberg said that while fewer housing units were being built today than since the 1940s, he looked for a strong recovery in 1976. "As things stand," he said, "more housing is deteriorating and being abandoned than being built."

Mehrberg said the new home of the seventies would, by necessity, become one with few frills in order to bring a price within the range of most buyers. Part of the impetus for this, he told an audience of 400 builders, was the recently announced federal subsidy program to allow buyers to obtain five per cent mortgages. The subsidy program is tailored to those in the market for homes selling for less than $30,000.

The program, announced by Housing and Urban Development Secretary Carla Hills, presents a keen challenge to the housing industry which has not seen such prices since the early seventies. "If we can meet the test," Mehrberg declared, it could mean 1,800 new housing units over the next two years and we could put 35,000 men back to work."

Mehrberg, a Staten Island builder, called on his colleagues to cut overhead drastically, use all available cost-cutting tools and trim their profit margins to bring about a recovery.

Addressing himself to the New York City default dilemma, Mehrberg blamed the situation, in part, on the city's rent control programs, which he said caused the city to lose close to $1 billion in taxable real estate over the past decade. "Rent control reform is essential to help solve the city's fiscal dilemma."

Mehrberg proposed a statewide property tax abatement system similar to that of New York City to reduce real property tax burdens faced by renters and buyers in new apartment and condominium buildings to make these units affordable.

Grand Union's Income

Operating income for The Grand Union Company's 12-week 1975 second fiscal quarter ended October 11, 1975, totaled $7,420,000 on sales of $361,735,000, it was reported today by James Wood, president and chief executive officer of the nation's ninth largest supermarket chain.

Operating income for the company's 13-week 1974 second quarter totaled $7,882,000 on sales of $383,910,000. For the 28-week 1975 first half fiscal year, the company's operating income totaled $12,135,000 on sales of $836,563,000. Operating income of $14,616,000 was recorded during the 26-week 1974 first half fiscal year on sales of $766,074,000.

The 1975 and 1974 results are not comparable because of a change in both the company's fiscal year and reporting periods.

After income taxes and unusual and non-operating items, net income for the 1975 second fiscal quarter amounted to $3,971,000 or 64 cents per share. The 1974 second fiscal quarter net income totaled $1,405,000, or 27 cents per share. Net income in the 1974 first half fiscal year totaled $2,825,000 or 44 cents per share.

SUNY Chancellor Warns Ford on Default Impact

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — State University Chancellor Ernest L. Boyer told President Ford Saturday night that if SUNY could not sell bonds soon, it would have to halt 43 projects valued at nearly $600 million.

In a telegram to Ford, Boyer and Elisabeth Luce Moore, chairman of SUNY's Board of Trustees, told the President that default by New York City would have a "devastating impact" on SUNY.

The city's fiscal crunch, they said, "already has made it impossible to market top-rated university bonds" and that could lead to construction shutdowns, unemployment and slashes in enrollment.

Specifically, they said, if the university's construction fund cannot sell its bonds, 43 projects valued at $593,287,100 at 15 campuses across the state will be halted.

Stopping the projects would result in "massive layoffs" of construction workers — there are now about 5,000 building trades employees working at the various sites — and an undetermined amount of workers in supporting industries also would be idled.

In addition, Boyer said, the inability to complete classrooms and other projects would cut the university's planned capacity by more than 10,000 students.

"Federal action to avoid default in the city is imperative to restore confidence in the marketplace," Boyer and Ms.

Moore said in their telegram to Ford, "your personal support is of greatest importance."

The projects that Boyer and Ms. Moore said would be affected by continued failure to market SUNY bonds:

Albany, central administration, central office building, $18,431,000.

Buffalo (Amherst), $157,191,000.

Buffalo (HSC), $1,655,000.

Buffalo (Meter Building), $1,086,500.

Stony Brook, $33,295,000.

Downstate Medical Center, $124,000.

Upstate Medical Center, $18,208,000.

Old Westbury, $13,620,000.

Plattsburgh, $10,000,000.

Purchase, $93,550,000.

Coast Warning

EL CAJON, Calif. (UPI) — The nation should not allow New York City to go bankrupt because of the impact default would have in other states, including California, state Treasurer Jesse Unruh claims.

He told more than 100 persons at a dinner reception held by the state Democratic central committee office that California "has faced up to its financial responsibility" under both Republicans and Democrats.

Alfred, $41,000.
Morrisville, $5,636,000.
Cornell, $6,910,000.
Utica-Rome, $548,000.

The Mercedes-Benz 280.
This year some new American cars look surprisingly like it.

The original—the Mercedes-Benz 280. Inspiration for other manufacturers' imitation.

The "Look-alikes" are here...sedans whose shapes and sizes will remind you of our Mercedes-Benz 280. The shape may look the same, but that is where the similarity ends.

You simply can't make a car into a Mercedes-Benz by imitating its appearance. Or its interior. Or any other single element. A car either is a Mercedes-Benz or it isn't.

We don't fault others for trying to follow the lead of the 280.
In fact, we applaud the move toward sensibly sized sedans. That's progress. But when you look beyond the new suits of clothes that the imitators are sporting, it's the same old story. Key elements like engines and suspension systems still have not changed.

Come in and see the original, the Mercedes-Benz 280 Sedan. Then arrange a test drive with us. We think you'll see why a Mercedes-Benz has become the standard other manufacturers measure by.

'Bloodmobile' a Major Step

ELLENVILLE
The Ulster County Blood Bank has taken a major step forward with acquisition of a "bloodmobile," a professionally built mobile unit with wide-ranging capabilities.

'Hundreds of county residents will benefit from it.'

Arthur C. Chipp, president of the Ulster County Blood Bank, accepted delivery of the unit at the monthly board of directors meeting in Ellenville.

The bloodmobile will enable the blood bank to visit many smaller companies, fire halls, clubs and organizations to draw blood, which has not been possible before.

"This will enable many hundreds of more people to enroll in and benefit from the group of individual programs offered by the Ulster County Blood Bank," commented Chipp. He added that the programs are open to all, regardless of age, physical condition or medical status living or working in Ulster County.

"We can, for instance, visit two or three groups in approximately the same time span and take our necessary quota of blood, which will be a great advantage for many," Chipp said.

The bloodmobile will also be used as an educational vehicle. "We plan," Chipp said, "to visit on a county-wide basis schools, high schools, universities, shopping malls, plazas, clubs, etc. which will give the general public an opportunity to inspect a professional bloodmobile and learn a great deal more about this vital community service."

The Ulster County Blood Bank, which began recruitment in 1970, has now progressed to where it is furnishing close to 100 per cent of all blood used by the Kingston Laboratory and the three hospitals in the county.

Chipp noted that blood drawn from members of the Ulster County Blood Bank is used almost exclusively within the county, except under emergency conditions when general reciprocity is practiced by all blood banking facilities.

The bloodmobile was manufactured by Specialized Mobile Units of Elrama, Penn., whose manager is James Chisolm.

Advance notice, whenever possible, will be made a few days prior to a visit by the bloodmobile. Further information concerning scheduling of visits can be received from Wilfred Springer, executive director of the blood bank, by calling 339-5525.

The primary driver of the bloodmobile will be Dewitt Hasbrouck, a retired IBM employee residing in High Falls. The vehicle will be housed in the former Trailways Garage in Kingston, which is now used by the Agency for Retarded Children.

Proxmire Bill Pleases Fish

WASHINGTON, D.C.
Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr. (R-25th) on the floor of the House recently congratulated Senator William Proxmire's Senate Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs for reporting out a bill to provide pre-default guarantees to New York in spite of the dampening effect of President Ford's recent statement.

"I congratulate Senator Proxmire and the members of his Senate Committee as I believe it a responsibility of Congress to go forward with possible legislation to insure aid for New York State and New York City, prior to bankruptcy, rather than following bankruptcy as the President proposes," Fish said.

"I for one can see no reason to put the city, the state, and the country through the wrenching trauma of a major municipal default before any assistance is offered.

"I do this as I disagree with the President when he asserts that a federal plan of assistance before default would insure that solution of the city's financial problems would never be found.

"The facts are that the city and state of New York are already taking steps to close the city's budget gap, with effective management of the city's financial affairs already in the hands of the Emergency Financial Control board.

"Additional steps to assure good fiscal management, if warranted, can be required by legislation enacted by the Congress to aid the state.

"In his statement, the President says he opposes any federal "bail-out" of New York. Yet following default, the President seems to feel such a "bail-out" justified.

"For if default occurs, it is clear a Federal "bail-out" is exactly what will happen.

"The President's plan calls for—as clearly it must—maintenance of essential services. Secretary of the Treasury William Simon has estimated that cost, at $1 billion over current city revenues in the first year following default. Congressional staff experts expect this figure could actually be between $2 and $3 billion following default.

"We are told trustee certificates will be issued against future revenue. But who will buy these certificates without federal guarantees? It is an age-old economic truth that the best obligations of a bad enterprise are difficult or impossible to sell.

"Because of this, experts believe that there will be an actual cash bail-out by taxpayers' money from the United States Treasury should default be permitted.

"What we are talking about then, is not whether federal guarantees will ever be given, but when—before or after default. I believe the best solution is to work to avoid default.

"My opposition to the President's proposal in no way indicates I approve or excuse the fiscal excesses which have led our nation's greatest city, and our country's second most populous state, to the brink of bankruptcy. It does indicate though that I believe every effort should be made to rescue the victim before, not after, it drowns," Fish concluded.

What does your bumper have to say?

There have all the clever graffiti writers gone? They're writing bumper stickers!

Your bumper's a place where you can editorialize on whatever your pet gripe, your cause, your politics, your creed. If those who share the road with you disagree, about the farthest they'll go is to look stonily ahead as they pass.

Young antagonists boast "I'm real bad" and "I hate everybody," while their mellower seniors boast "Bald is Beautiful" and "I'm not a dirty old man . . . I'm a sexy senior citizen."

"Uppity women of the world, unite!" advertises a liberated woman with a sense of humor. "Don't blame me, I voted for McGovern" appeared at the height of Watergate.

Even religion has taken to this unique form of communication: "Blow your horn if you love Jesus" . . . and "Dear Lord, please teach Harry to keep his mouth shut."

On the highways, the safety conscious affixed "If you can read this, you're too damn close." The owner of a foreign car high on gas mileage but low on pickup apologized, "I'm peddling as fast as I can."

A recently divorced lady can let the world know: "Nobody Mrs. me anymore." And those who get flustered in traffic can counter with their bumper, "Beep, beep, your ———."

We bring this bumper humor to you this Sunday as a public service. Now that the votes are counted, it may be easier to cover up that political sticker than scrape it off. And nothing's staler than a political bumper sticker after election day . . . especially if your candidate lost.

BRAINWASHING

he term "brainwashing" has been bandied about lately, in connection with the Hearst kidnaping; the Unification Church; less with regard to Communism because of detente; and very little with regard to television advertising, vilified about 15 years ago by the Vance Packard crowd ("The Hidden Persuaders").

It has entered the language as a loose generalization for any persistently expressed point of view, i.e. "they really brainwash you in the service."

There is plenty of strong propaganda around, and it is loud and deeply ingrained in our minds (this reporter can recite TV commercials from when he was five years old), but most of us have retained the capacity to doubt and, indeed, been encouraged to doubt by the multiplicity of constantly conflicting opinion.

This contrasts deeply with that place where only one version, the official one, is tolerated; where the individual is rendered absolutely subordinate to the group; and where the strange and ancient rites of man to confess, purge, and be reborn are kindled with the high intensity emotional rhetoric of one more "plan to save mankind."

History records oppressions with severe indoctrination by both political and religious groups in all parts of the world. But only within the past 50 years have men been able to coordinate their scientific and

An early training film in 1928 in Russia showed a boy reacting to lights, salivating like the dogs Pavlov had used earlier. In 1936 the first hint of applied science were put on public show when the West was horrified by a procession of old Bolsheviks in the dock in Moscow announcing that they were traitors. Later, Cardinal Mindszenty of Hungary appeared to suffer a similar breakdown.

Said Lenin, "We must be engineers of the human soul." Robert J. Lifton in his book "Thought Reform and the Psychology of Totalism" gave the opinion that "thought reform" is different from imposed doctrine in that it is more organized, comprehensive, deliberate, and is total in character, and he viewed the Chinese effort as "one of the most powerful efforts at human manipulation ever undertaken."

Said Lifton, who personally interviewed dozens of newly released Korean POWs in Hong Kong, "Thought reform combines impressively widespread distribution with focused emotional power . . . It seeks to bring about in everyone it touches a significant personal upheaval."

Mass obedience can be obtained through stern intimidation and relentless indoctrination in a closed society. What methods of "brainwashing" are available for those who wish to concentrate on individuals, for either political or religious reasons?

The Victims Speak

The following are all statements made by victims of "brainwashing" (stress conversion) about themselves or other victims. Some were made more than 20 years ago and some this year. Some were political and some religious. Doctrine and dogma are not the issue here. The primary difference to be noted is in the developing sophistication of technique, the gradual replacement of physical intimidation with mental and emotional. Some speakers were physical prisoners. All said, in retrospect, that they were mental prisoners. With naive voluntary participation in the process, complete dependence on the "captor" comes quickly.

"I lost all ability to think for myself; I was programmed, hypnotized, and felt myself reacting emotionally to key words."

"Now I know that their aim was to becloud my clarity of mind."

"They had been devilishly persistent, inhumanly patient."

"They were always insisting on confessions, and on what they called self-criticism."

"I was made to feel guilty about everything in my past."

"We worked 20 hours and slept two; I was always tired."

"I'd rather be whipped than have this questioning continue."

"There was persistent striving to remember every detail."

"If I could only have had one day's break."

"There were strong emotional wrenchings."

"They'd tell him and the others they would die or be committed to mental institutions within one year."

"They keep them exhausted, eliminate all proteins from their diets, lecture them constantly and make them sleep on the floor."

"Their ability to make decisions is effectively killed."

"They act like a smart parent. You had to look to them for everything, and in this way they replace your mother and father."

"There's a gradual recession toward childhood and dependency."

"After awhile I was intoxicated. I couldn't get enough."

"I've had others try to strangle me. Many end up in mental institutions."

"One by one they make every alternative impossible. They say you have to act voluntarily. You're trapped like a rat."

"My mistake was in taking this seriously, thinking they actually believed what they were saying."

"Unless a person had convictions, this left him completely defenseless, without weapons to fight back."

"I believed I had had a hallucination, and I believed I hadn't."

"You were grateful enough to do anything they wanted."

"When a person repeats something often enough, thinking up new ways in which to express it, although he may begin by disbelieving every word of it he is likely to end up by swallowing a lot of it."

The result is fanatic dedication to an ideal to the extent that the ability to reason was descended to the level of "This is the absolute good; therefore, everyone who criticizes or questions any aspect is absolutely evil." Paralyzing fear has been the stimulus to freeze attitudes into a mold although part of the litany in both political and religious stress conversions emphasizes constant positive imagery (smiles and enthusiasm) and a zeal to "save" the rest of the world, a powerful motivation.

From all indications, most stress conversions are reversible. They require a totalistic society, even a small and insulated one, in which to flourish; when converts are removed from this control they tend to forget.

SSaid one college student after a bout with one powerful religious cult locally, "I needed a long period of time to sort things out, to start thinking for myself again after having a blank mind."

United Nations prisoners of war released in the "Big Switch" after the Korean conflict, many imprisoned and "brainwashed" for more than two years, remained in a daze for weeks or months, but most were able to reflect calmly on their experiences a year or two afterward when the conditioned emotional reactions had faded.

Who is susceptible?

Take a hellfire and damnation type theme (which has a pretty good track record for conversions by itself) with its "you are lost" guilt heaped high and the only way out is (choose your own); add a tremendously complex and convincing dialectic (argument) that includes emotionally charged key words, which are complex ideas compressed into a phrase like "bourgeois mentality" or "burn in hell;" add repeated and coordinated efforts to involve the individual to commit himself, with each step inevitably leading to the next (have you ever been pressured by a really good used-car salesman?); and assume that the individual's physical and mental resistance has been worn down through fatigue, lack of protein, and intimidation . . . and you have a recipe for inducing great neurological stress with attendant hallucinations, possible convulsions, and other forms of Pavlov's "protective inhibition," or "shock."

The body will ultimately react to stress, regardless of the intelligence or strength of the mind. The human will can survive until its sensory support mechanisms technological research with psychological observation to perfect methods of physiologically bringing about "conversions."

The key word was found to be "motivation." But if you could substitute your own motivation in another person's mind, in a million peoples' minds. Emotional energy spent for "the cause" in a man can be harnessed to start a chain reaction of converts, a group more than self-sustaining because they require little sleep, little expensive food, poor accommodations, but . . . constant supervision.

Edward Hunter, an American journalist of broad experience, coined the word "brainwashing" to describe the processes tried on United Nations troops captured during the Korean conflict. The stories were almost all the same from these men with "the thousand mile stare" and many never fully recovered their former alertness.

Alexander Solzhenitsyn, the Nobel Prize-winning Russian author, tells tales of the fate of the "unbalanced" person who does not understand the "truth." It was discovered by Lenin within a few years after the Russian Revolution that making a success of the untried Marxist philosophy was going to take a lot of persuasion. He discovered an aging and poor biologist, Ivan P. Pavlov, furnished him with elaborate laboratories and assistants, and transferred his later experiments on conditioned reflexes in the nervous system to achieve desired responses from human beings.

'The thousand mile stare' described the countenance of servicemen who had been subjected to brainwashing. It crops up daily in the nation's news; yet few of us know how it is accomplished. Tim Schuster researched for us and came up with these startling findings.

fail, when you can no longer believe what you see or what you remember and your mind may take a sudden plunge in exactly the opposite direction it has been taught. Then, after the "decision" has been made for conversion the load and confusion are lifted, you feel giddy and supercharged, a moment of euphoria is experienced, great relief washes over you.

The breaking point, while different for every individual, is achieved by following a pattern. It is billed in religion as a "mystical experience" and much of what has been considered good in history has resulted from people who have used their newfound dedication to better the lot of humanity. In the wrong hands it can also be just a cheap assembly-line method of control.

It was Pavlov's contention that nervous system is in a state of dynamic equilibrium, with great changes capable through great excitation or great inhibition. The drums of voodoo might be a valid example of supercharging the nervous system; fasting and withdrawal can inhibit the nervous system. As early as 700 B.C. the art of self-induced hallucination through breath control is recorded in India.

In the U.S., the greatest exploration of these phenomena has been in medicine and, lately, illegal drugs. Valium, a mood-changing tranquilizer, is the number one selling prescription drug. Amphetamines are popped for a speedy charge. A cloud of marijuana hangs over the nation. Physiologically induced attitude and mood changes are a fact.

Who is most susceptible to organized attacks on the psyche, whether "good" or "bad" in end result? The young are usually the targets as they are relatively unattached, have much untapped energy, may be away from home for the first time, have a great deal of idealism that can be exploited, and probably haven't solidified as many strong convictions as their elders. Many people also seek the security that is offered, unaware that they are trading their freedom of thought.

Said one girl interviewed, "I was lonely and something of a loner; they were so open and friendly and had such good arguments* . . ." She dropped out of college one week later to join a cult, to later regret it.

In this country, attractive bait must be used, in stark contrast to added threats of physical violence that permeates a totalitarian society. Once the will is directed 100 percent toward the "desired" goal, constant supervision and a system of organized tattle-tales is necessary to keep the energy directed.

It is this fact, proven countless times, that gives hope. Remove the individual from the source of brainwashing for a long enough period of time and the mind will forget the subtle cues and will begin to operate once more, locating inconsistencies. Professional help is often needed to understand the past mental addiction.

Unification of thought for everyone means stagnation and the strong likelihood of control from a central source: witness Hitler's right wing totalitarianism and the Soviets' left wing slave labor camps — there is little to choose between the two.

Western civilization has developed with great respect for the individual, in contrast to the largely feudalistic caste systems in the East that have turned to glorification of the state through Communism. We have become wary of the abuses of power, whether instigated by government, industry, religion, or power made individuals.

Brainwashing in itself is a scientific discovery. Perverted by the power hungry, it is a potential danger. The best defense is awareness of its existence.

And only the naive swallow somebody else's systems of thought whole. Think for yourself.

Stalking the wild Puffball

Morel Mushroom

Shaggy Mane

he overabundant rains this year may or may not have hurt the rhubarb . . . but it certainly did well by mushrooms. Reports kept coming in on the United Press wire of people poisoned by mushrooms of their own choosing.

We thought it might be late for this story . . . but the other day as we left City Hall, there on the lawn was a tempting cluster of mushrooms, specie unknown.

The Home Extension Division of the Ulster County Agricultural Society was kind enough to unearth some bulletins from Cornell University for us. According to Cornell's Dan Benardot, it's even chancier than we had feared. Picking wild mushrooms is a game of roulette.

There are several hundred species in the United States, some of which are always poisonous, others are poisonous only in certain seasons and locations, or when eaten raw, or during a particular stage of maturity.

The chemistry of the mushroom-eater matters, as well. One man's champignon is another man's poison mushroom. Even one bite of villainous fungi can deliver the same devastating blow that Snow White's apple harbored.

Cooking a poisonous mushroom will not lessen its sting. Nor will silver tarnish when dipped in these poisonous parasites while they're cooking. That old wife that decreed that the mushroom cap that peels is safe was lying.

As innocuous as they look, poison mushrooms are fatal in more than half the cases reported.

If you're still determined to make like Uell Gibbons, there are a few safe ones that are easy to distinguish and do not resemble any of the toxic species. One is the Morel Mushroom. The cap is round to cone-shape, wrinkled with large crevices. It resembles a sponge. It is sandy or light ochre in color, and hollow from cap to stem. Cutting it open to see that it is hollow from top to bottom is an excellent method of identification. They are considered by some to be the most delicious of all fungi. Cow paths, apple orchards, and moist woods are likely hunting grounds, usually from late April to early June.

The Shaggy Mane is another friendly mushroom. It has a scaly surface on its narrow egg-shaped cap. It is 2 to 5 inches long and 2 inches wide with a white surface covered with very light pink or light brown scales. When young, the time when it's tastiest, the cap is attached to the stem. The stem is about 4 inches long and 1/2 to 1 inch wide. It is smooth, white and hollow. The Shaggy Mane spoils quickly, within two days. Eat them promptly, freeze them in an air-tight container, or saute them and store covered in the refrigerator.

And now to the Puffball. We really thought we were being put on when someone first raved on about the gastronomic delight of the puffball. As children we had kicked these white globs in the lawn, watching the fine brown powder waft away on a zephyr . . . toward someone's unsuspecting sinus, I imagine.

But sure enough Mr. Benardot describes the Puffball as being good to eat most any way you cook it. About the size of a volleyball, it is found in late summer and fall in pastures or lawns that are well fertilized. The Puffball is only good to eat in its pure white state. As it matures, the interior begins to turn yellow, then brown, and is finally transformed into the brown powder. One word of caution: don't mistake the deadly poisonous Amanita for a Puffball. Cut the fungus from top to bottom and look for the homogeneous interior without any sign of young gills. If you find gills, discard the mushroom immediately.

For the record, Mr. Benardot says that Wild Hickory Nuts don't really taste like Grape Nuts.

Thanks, muchly, Mr. Gibbons, but I'll take my Grape Nuts from Post and my mushrooms wrapped in powder blue tissue.

1776 comes alive on the Kingston High Stage

Those of us who yawned through History I and II and slept through History III and IV will envy the scholars lucky enough to attend "Give Me Liberty or Give Me Death."

Patrick Henry not only lives, breathes, and delivers his immortal lines, he sings, too. It's a musical romp based on the life of America's famous patriot. The travelling troupe has been rewarded with favorable reviews wherever they have played, and they're playing here in the Kingston High School Auditorium on Friday, November 21 at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m.

The audience will be made up of all the fifth and sixth-grade students in Kingston Schools Consolidated.

"Is life so dear, or peace so sweet, as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery? Forbid it, Almighty God! I know not what course others may take; but as for me . . . give me liberty or give me death."

Patrick couldn't make it as a farmer, but few expected him to make it as a lawyer. When Tom Flagg belts out his song of elation, "I've Done It" and his clarion call "We Are Ready To Go To War," the message of the Bicentennial rings clear.

Now if someone would only put the new math to music, maybe we parents would stand a chance.

"GIVE ME LIBERTY OR GIVE ME DEATH"

Slavery in New York

"Every human being who breathes the air of the state shall enjoy the privileges of a free man," said New York's Gouverneur Morris at the State's first Constitutional Convention in 1777. New York was at last on the long road to abolishing slavery, a road that reflected more than a century of human bondage and misery for New York's slave population.

Slaves were imported to New Amsterdam as early as 1626 by the Dutch West India Company. This company which helped develop and govern New Netherland believed that the safest way to insure the success of a colony was to promote slavery and the slave trade within the colony. New Amsterdam burghers even invested in a slave ship, financed the ship's journeys and participated in the profits. The ship's "merchandise" was sold at public auction, the average price for one slave bringing less than $140. Most of the slaves came from the West Indies although the Dutch and later the English slave traders would also bring back slaves from the African coast. At first New Netherland proved a poor market for slavery. There was a scarcity of large farms in the area eliminating the need for a massive labor force as the Dutch settlers were more interested in quick profit adventures such as trading with the Indians, than in permanently establishing their colony by developing its rich agricultural resources. Unsold slaves were left in the hands of the Dutch West India Company and were used to build public buildings and military installations such as the fort on Oyster Bay in Long Island.

It wasn't until after 1640 when agriculture began to expand that the need for slave labor increased in New York State. Long Island and Westchester became the leading slave buying settlements and slaves from Angola and Brazil were imported to farms in the Hudson River Valley. Hudson farmers depended more and more upon slave labor to keep their fast growing estates self-sufficient.

Slavery increased again in 1664 when the English captured New Netherland. The Royal African Company whose stockholders included the king, his brother, and the Duke of York replaced the Dutch West India Company as the colony's leading slave-trading corporation. A small sampling of a special census taken in 1755 of slaves over fourteen years of age shows the scale and locations of slaveholdings in the colony. Lewis Morris of Morrisania (located in what is now South Bronx) had twenty-nine slaves over fourteen years old. Peter DeLancy of Westchester Borough had twelve, Thomas Dongan of Staten Island and Martinus Hoffman of Dutchess County had ten. David Jones of Oyster Bay, Rutger Van Brunt of New Utrecht, and Isaac Willett of Westchester Borough also had ten and 1,120 slaveholders had less than ten slaves over fourteen years of age. The typical slaveholding family usually had in its service a single small family of slaves.

Slaves of the Hudson River Valley received fairly humane treatment from their owners and in the early part of the seventeenth century there were few laws to restrict their movements. Tighter controls on slavery and slave conduct came with the English. The Common Council of New York passed an ordinance in 1680 banning the sale of liquor to slaves without the consent of their masters and in 1702 a law repeating an earlier ban on trading with slaves was enacted. The law of 1702 also forbade the meeting of more than three slaves at any time or place unless by their master's consent or in their master's service. In Kingston the punishment for more than three slaves found together was a public whipping or an eight shilling fine for their owners. Each town in New York was required to maintain a "common whipper" or "Negro whipper" to flog violators. In Smithtown by 1702 slaves needed a pass to travel more than a mile from the city and in 1705 slaves caught traveling forty miles above Albany could be executed.

"Incidents" of rebellion occurred in 1696 in New York City when a group of slaves refused to disperse at the order of the mayor of New York and a more organized insurrection broke out in 1712. Both rebellions were quickly and severely dealt with. New York masters however began to live in fear of a slave overthrow and in 1741 a rumored slave conspiracy brought hysteria and plunged the city of New York into atrocious slave persecutions.

The movement to abolish slavery in New York began at about the middle of the eighteenth century and by the later part of the century, the drive to free the slaves was well underway. Slave trade was outlawed in 1788 and by 1817, slavery in New York State faced almost complete extinction. The stage was now set for the "Underground Railroad." The "railroad" was actually a system of cooperation among anti-slavery people in helping fugitive slaves from the South reach freedom in the North or in Canada. The "Underground Railroad" has many lines in New York. One route which ran up the Hudson to Albany broke off into two branches, one branch leading into Vermont above Troy, up the Champlain Valley to Canada and the other ranch leading west through Utica and Syracuse with lesser routes from Auburn to Oswego. From Syracuse the path to freedom led to Lockport and Niagara. Elmira had lines running south to Harrisburg, west to Hornell and to the Finger Lakes, Morgansville, Pembroke, Clarence and Buffalo. Routes in the southwest part of the state ran along Lake Ontario and connected Rochester with St. Catherine's, the final connection being Toronto. Niagara Falls was a junction and Peterboro was on the line leading directly to Waverly and indirectly to Stroudsburg and Philadelphia. The abolitionist village of Mexico and Port Ontario also had a line which led to Kingston, Canada and north to Cape Vincent.

30 thousand Frenchmen say "Enough" to porno films . . .

By Rosette Hargrove

PARIS — (NEA) — Fearful of being overwhelmed by a wave of "hard core" movies, the French are beginning to think that enough is enough so far as pornographic films go.

An opinion poll carried out by the weekly Paris Match showed that the majority of citizens would be glad to see film censorship restored. By a majority of almost two to one, they deemed such films dangerous to society.

This revulsion may seem strange in a country which was never known to be puritanical in its approach to sex.

But today, not only in Paris but in remote country towns, people flock to the local movie whenever there is a porno film showing.

According to Paris Match, the wave of erotica starting first in the press, then the theater ("Hair," "O Calcutta") now is rampant in the cinema. This followed the removal of all censorship, which two years ago would have seemed impossible.

If the poll is any criterion, what is the deep conviction of the French regarding this latest development? It shows that for 86 per cent of the population, erotica — either in movies or the press — is not a valid form of sexual education.

Despite the gospel of Women's Lib, 50 per cent believe that it contributes to the deterioration of the "feminine condition."

Visual pornography, i.e., movie publicity posters, was declared harmful by 73 per cent, while 63 per cent consider the pornographic film a dangerous social phenomenon.

As for the question of moral liberty, it was pointed out this is just another liberty, so why condemn it?

This distinction was approved by 52 per cent, while 40 per cent vetoed it. The explanation, however, is simple. The liberty in question is that which allows every individual to lead his own life. But many in favor are convinced that such liberty does not condone either exhibitionism or proselytizing.

While the prestige movie houses on the Champs Elysees are showing nonstop erotic films such as the soft-core "Emmanuelle," now nearing its second year and said to have grossed over $10 million, hard core is only just beginning to emerge on the screens.

The authorities are faced with something of a dilemma. In an interview given to the popular France Dimanche, Minister of the Interior Michel Poniatowski, who is also the director of French police departments, shrugged his shoulders on the subject.

He pointed out that there was nothing new under the sun, that the greatest pornographers were the ancient Greeks, followed by those of the Italian Renaissance and later by a number of French authors in the 19th century.

He is convinced there soon will be a return to romanticism. Those countries, including Denmark, where the mass-audience pornographic film first appeared, have registered a falling off in the popularity of such art. "You will see a return to naive sentimentality, portraying true love, if only because pornography soon becomes a big bore," Poniatowski commented.

In "French Film," the Minister for the Feminine Condition, Francoise Giroud, declared, "Porno films? They are sick-making." She did, however, add that "eroticism can be chaste, cerebral." A commentator pointed out that the first task assigned to her was to assert women's dignity, so greatly and cruelly compromised hitherto by men in general.

Until censorship is restored, if ever, Finance Minister Pierre Fourcade intimated some time ago that he might study higher taxes for pornographic films, a move which, according to the poll, women favor. Meanwhile, a movement is afoot to halt the public display of nudes in suggestive posters decorating the facades of movie houses, as well as the exhibition of photographs in the vestibules of movies.

Overheard two youngsters discussing "The Story of O," the latest offering in the porn market which has been greatly publicized, also forbidden to minors, one clinched the argument with: "Who'd spend their pocket money for that. That's good for the old-timers only." While still another, over 18, when asked what he thought of "Emmanuelle" said: "Boring, repetitious, too much of everything."

When "The Last Tango in Paris" was first shown in Paris, many people would be inclined to slink into the theater, fearing to be seen. Today this movie is considered as innocuous as a Charlotte Bronte novel. The most stately elderly ladies and gentlemen, middle-aged couples, women with shopping bags show no self-consciousness about viewing it.

Sociologists point to this fact as evidence of the escalation of bourgeois values. Before the French Revolution, erotica was the prerogative of the nobility. Today, in the words of a Breton fisherman, "They cannot go any farther without becoming medical. As on TV they show how now it is possible to introduce a camera inside a stomach to find out how it works and what is wrong."

Young singer rocks 'rock'

By BRUCE MEYER
UPI

He is an unlikely looking candidate for stardom — thin and rather pale, a prominent nose, scraggly beard covering a jutting lower jaw and unkempt black hair that cries out for a dose of old-fashioned grease.

His name is Bruce Springsteen. He is 26. He is from Freehold, N.J., and he gives every indication of becoming the first important figure in the third generation of American rock 'n' roll.

Springsteen and his music are epitomized by contrasts. He writes complex, narrative, even poetic songs. And he has the stage presence of a natural actor. He has created a genuine new fusion of black and white music — a "sound" that could conceivably serve as the foundation for a new surge of creativity in popular music. And — after more than a decade of British dominance in rock — Springsteen threatens to bring the music back home to America. There is no hint of London or Liverpool in his images: — In the day we sweat it out in the streets of a runaway American dream At night we ride through the mansions of glory in suicide machines Sprung from cages on Highway 9 Chrome wheeled, fuel injected And steppin' out over the line Baby this town rips the bones from your back It's a death trap, it's a suicide rap We gotta get out while we're young 'Cause tramps like us, baby we were born to run ("Born to Run" by Bruce Springsteen, c 1974 Laurel Canyon Music Ltd.) —

Springsteen's songs adopt a Jersey street punk viewpoint — an image he carries through on stage. Members of his group, the E Street Band, dress up-town slick — coordinated suits, patent shoes, broad-brim hats. But Springsteen appears in cuffed blue denims, worn sneakers, ragged t-shirt and floppy brown cap.

Flanked by Clarence Clemons on sax and "Miami Steve" Van Zandt on lead guitar, Springsteen churns from song to song with a furious electric energy that can leave audiences openmouthed.

They want to find out what you know!

Just Testing, Kids, Just Testing!

Here are some things that are happening in education throughout the country. Check the ones that are happening in your school.

Recent tests have shown that many adult Americans can't balance a checkbook!

☐ Testing

Interested taxpayers, lawmakers, parents and educators are looking at what you are doing in school as never before.

They want to find out if what you are studying is really helping prepare you for a job and for life outside of school.

Lawmakers in many states are passing laws demanding testing programs to see exactly where you are in your studies.

While all this testing is going on, many educators are asking questions about these tests. Are they any good? Are they fair? Are they finding out information that is useful?

☐ Open Education

Are you in a big classroom where you often sit on the floor and move about when you want to? Do you get a lot of individual attention?

☐ Traditional Education

Are the desks in your room in neat rows? Does your teacher stress reading, writing and arithmetic? Are you memorizing your math facts?

☐ Alternate Education

By choice, are you going to a school that is different from all the other schools in your community? The parents that start these schools decide how different these schools will be.

☐ Metric Education

Are you learning about meters, grams and liters?

The Liter is neater!

☐ Energy Education

Are you studying about the energy shortage?

Sitting on a dunce stool was a kind of punishment that was used in Colonial times. It certainly would be frowned on today. You'll be seeing lots of scenes like this as kids relive school life of 200 years ago.

☐ The Bicentennial

Are you seeing students and teachers in Colonial costumes? Are you dipping candles and making soap? Are you studying a lot about our past as we celebrate our 200th birthday?

The debate continues is it 'fair game' ?

ince the beginning of time man has been a hunter. He has devised thousands of varied weapons, geared not only for his protection but for the killing of birds and animals needed for the survival of his family and himself. Many of our present day subcultures are still dependent on wildlife for this very reason. However, in this land of Kentucky Fried Chicken and McDonald Hamburgers, our own immediate need for the killing of wild creatures gives rise to an element of both curiosity and concern.

With the advent of deer season (Nov. 18th to Dec. 10th), it is interesting to note the varying attitudes toward the killing of deer and other animals in our area: to the hunter and conservation officers the deer is a foe, his feeding habits are destructive to farmers, orchard owners, bulb growers, etc. The deer is not overly fussy as to where he eats—so long as he eats in abundance. To the farmer who grows alfalfa to feed his cattle, for instance, deer pose a real threat to his well being, often consuming a goodly portion of his yield.

Over fifty percent of gun permits are issued growers and dairy men who are allowed to shoot more deer than the average hunter. Game wardens claim that if deer are not killed, they will overrun the land and become a hazard to all of us or, at least, that their chances of survival in a particularly hard winter would be very slim.

Ecologists disagree, however, with many pro-hunting claims. They suggest that perhaps it is not the over-population of the deer that should be our concern but rather the over-population of hunters (15,000,000 at last count). They list such detrimental items as overcrowded highways, beer can-littered woods, and poorly trained sportsmen armed with weapons with which they have no expertise.

Animals all too often die slowly and in agony because of poorly aimed "hits".

By New York Conservation Dep't. estimates, upwards of 65,000 deer (12,000 of them fawns) were slaughtered in the state last year. The "sportsmen" say that the predation of deer by feral dog packs in addition to severe winters would result in the deaths of many of these deer, anyway. Ecologists disagree, saying that the foremost predator to, let's say, the white-tailed deer, is man, and further hold that for as many deer that are killed, twice the number are wounded and maimed for life, or left to die in pain. They further hold that not only deer are endangered by the sportsmen, but that many personal pets and farm animals—mistaken for the quarry—are also shot and killed. I know of an instance, not too long ago, of an excited call from a hunter, saying that he had shot and killed a large wolf. Wolves are not known to be in our area so, consequently, the story was covered by local press, replete with photographs of the animal strung up to a tree by the hunter, with pride. The "wolf" was viewed by many people, most especially by one old gentleman on the verge of tears—it was not a wolf that was so proudly displayed, but the old gentleman's husky dog, his devoted friend for many years.

Veterinarians are not often consulted in cases of mistaken identity, but during hunting season they are extremely busy extracting arrows and bullets from everything from chihuahuas to horses to Guernsey cows, hurt by hunters generally in the area of their own abodes, and frequently on posted land.

According to Mr. Cleveland Amory, a well known foe of the killing of wild life, "the reason there are too many deer is that hunters either (a) shot off their natural predators or (b) 'managed' them in such a way, that hoping to have more kill, they actually produced starvation".

The question remains is the hunting of deer and other game a true necessity or a recreational sport? And, if a sport, what kind of thrill comes with the bloodletting that results from the pursuit of our wildlife? It would seem that mankind is not only dangerous to animals but, as evidenced by the prevalence of shooting accidents to humans during hunting season, dangerous to himself, as well. As Tom Lehrer, a musician, has said in "The Hunting Song":

"People ask me how I do it
And I say there's nothing to it,
You just stand there looking cute
And when something moves, you shoot,
And there's ten stuffed heads
In my trophy room right now:
Two game wardens, seven hunters, and a cow"

Super Sport: Ken Stabler

They call Ken Stabler "The Snake." He strikes quickly. He's deadly, too, at passing a football. In 1974, the Oakland Raiders' quarterback threw 26 touchdown passes and was voted Most Valuable Player in the National Football League. Some think he's the best quarterback in professional football.

Ken wears jersey No. 29. He is six-feet, three inches tall and weighs 215 pounds. Stabler was born on Christmas Day in Foley, Alabama. He attended the University of Alabama, and in 1965, led the Crimson Tide to a national championship.

American Education Week—Nov. 16-22

Many parents and other interested citizens will be visiting schools next week during American Education Week. This week has been observed each year for the past 54 years. Its purpose is to get Americans to do what they can to make our schools better.

The theme of this year's week is: "Our Future Is in Our Schools."

This is going to be a very busy week since it is also Children's Book Week.

Parents as Teachers

Many parents are going into classrooms and teaching special interest courses to students. The parents volunteer to teach a special class for about an hour a week. The children sign up for the classes that interest them.

This parent is teaching radio and television programming to a group of sixth graders.

MAKING

By Joan L. Woinoski

Halloween is over. Election Day is past. The holidays are approaching . . . FAST!

Lookin' back, 'twas a hectic year.

First off, there was another great buffet-dance in October at St. Peter's. Everybody was havin' such a ball, the band played an EXTRA hour; "everybody" stayed. It was so hot and couples were so thirsty, the kitchen ran out of ice cubes. Guests had to chop their own. One gent was gone so long, his wife thought he took off for Binnewater . .

Former Kirkland Hotel patrons will know just what we mean 'cause Chef Roem practiced his culinary art there for 17 years.

And, speakin' of the Kirkland, spotted Max and Ruth Brugmann there, along with Judy MacIsaac, District Attorney and Mrs. Frank Vogt, Marguerite Deringer. Marguerite left early; it was Election Night eve and she had to be out of the sack by 4 a.m. the next day.

Potpourri

Lovely cocktail party a week ago Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Legg. Conversation centered around two of the mayoral hopefuls: Frank Koenig and Bill Darling. Seems both graced the Armory with their presence the night before; they were belly dancing at the Greek gala. No . . . not together, silly!

*****

*****

By now, Bud Stewart's lily white skin must've gotten back to normal; Bud played so much golf this summer in his favorite wide-knit T-shirt and got so-o-o sunburned that for several months he looked like a burnt waffle.

New Year's Eve came early to Eleven Main last week. Actually, it was Cor's first anniversary celebration, but the crowds, music, food and laughter offered shades of midnight Dec. 31.

Speakin' of food, Holland-born Chef Aart Roem outdid himself . . . best chicken livers we've ever tasted. Actually, the whole buffet was almost too beautiful to eat.

Chef Roem's wife Annie was hostess . . . another Perle Mesta. As for Cor, he was so busy burnin' this way to greet the newcomers and that way to "good-by" the goers, that all he needed was a tennis racket and he'd have qualified as another Bobby Riggs.

Jack St. John's Ulster Savings Bank just launched ANOTHER branch down Poughkeepsie-way on South Road. There was a gala party with cocktails, hors d'oeuvres, and good conversation.

Jenner Kittle was there, showing guests around and explaining the complicated computers. But, lovely as the new bank is, it must be noted that it's Jenner's branch across town at Poughkeepsie Plaza that's the only one in the country so far that gives temperature readings in the new metric system.

It's that time of year again! Potpourri's anniversary. Yup, we've started our eighth year. Don't call . . . throw flowers!

It's working

Thanks to you
